PREFACE

THE PRESENT PAPER was prepared between March and December, 1943, under the auspices of the University of California at Berkeley, while the author was a research assistant in the Department of Anthropology. The data were assembled in the Bancroft Library, under ideal working conditions. The author wishes to express his gratitude to the staff of that Library for its coöperation, and to Professors Alfred Kroeber and Carl Sauer for their critical aid. Mrs. C. A. Block, Editor of the Department of Anthropology, contributed valuable advice on the technical problems of format. As for the translations scattered through the text, the author has chosen to make them loose, being aware that translations are at best worthless toys. No amount of ingenious paraphrase can possibly supplant the original documents, to which those wishing to investigate the problems of the paper will turn. (Certain emendations of the text have been made in Mexico during the succeeding five years.)

The Empire of the Culhua Mexica facing 144

I. INTRODUCTION

NATURE OF THE PRESENT STUDY

THE PRESENT PAPER IS the first part of a study of the empire that Cortés invaded when he set foot at Vera Cruz in 1519. This is the empire wrongly called "Aztec"—a term which the writer has considered elsewhere¹ and for which he proposes to substitute the name "Culhua Mexica." This and a second paper, to be published later, deal with the geographical extent of the Empire of the Culhua Mexica and with its division into tributary provinces. All towns that can be proved to have been subject to the Valley of Mexico in 1519 will be dealt with in the two parts of this study of Culhua Mexica. Later and more detailed portions of the larger study consider this vast Empire chronologically: how and when it came to reach its final dimensions, who dominated it at the outset and who toward the end, and so forth. The present mapping of the Empire of the Culhua Mexica is a necessary preliminary to the historical studies (in the form of local histories) which are to follow, and which are the writer's chief aim.

Great exactness is possible in mapping the Empire (see map at end of book), because of one monumental document, the Matricula de Tributos; its bibliography is considered in the second section of this Introduction. It is the original native tribute list, in which the payment exacted from the provinces was recorded; it is the official bookkeeping ledger of the Empire, a hardheaded, realistic document. The Matricula is shaped like a book, in which hieroglyphs for various towns—ranging in number from two to nearly thirty—of a province are

This empire was the product of a Triple Alliance among three tribes settled in the Valley of Mexico. These three tribes differed in religion, in customs, and doubtless in many other things. Their names were the Tepaneca, the Acolhuaque, and the Mexica. (The Mexica were subdivided into Tenochca and Tlatelolca.) The chief towns of each during the period of the Empire—roughly speaking, the century before the Spaniards came—were Tlacopan [Tacuba], Texcoco, and Mexico-Tenochtitlan (with Mexico-Tlatelolco active from 1428 to 1473). In 1519, the end of the native period, the Mexica of Tenochtitlan had quite overshadowed their allies, so that it is proper to call the Empire of the final period—which is the period of the present study—the Empire of the Mexica or Mexicans. But more exactly, it should be called the Empire of the Culhua Mexica, for reasons I have set forth in the above-cited paper. It is hopelessly erroneous to call it the Aztec Empire, for although the name Aztec was once applied to the Culhua Mexica, at the start of their history, they had discarded it long before founding their capital city.

painted along the outer and lower margins of the page, the rest of the page being taken up by the items of tribute for which these towns were jointly responsible. The place names on a given page prove to be geographically contiguous on modern maps, and so it is evident that the towns were regarded as a unit, as all having something in common. I have called each region thus indicated a "province," partly in order to provide some territorial division, but also because these groupings of towns were in some measure expressions of former political or linguistic units. Most of the Matlatzinca-speaking towns, for example, cluster on a page of their own; moreover, they were all conquered in a continuous campaign of a few years. These provinces (indicated on the map by large arabic numerals) I have named after the introductory glyphs, assuming the first glyph on each page to represent the most important town. Other available sources justify this. In another source, for instance, in the province I have named Tepequacuilco, Tepequacuilco is stated to be the "presidio de gente de guarnicion que cobravan los tributos: y recogieron de toda la cuisca [Cohuixca];"² in that which I have named Coayxtlahuacan, Coayxtlahuacan is called "donde el dicho Muntecumha tenia puesta su frontera de gente de guerra."³ The borders of the provinces as they existed in 1519 have been commented on in detail where these were adjacent to non-Mexican lands.

Most of these invaluable place glyphs of the Matricula could be read even if they were all we had, and they are of course the final authorities. The task of reading them, however, is greatly simplified by the annotations they bear; the Matricula itself contains scattered and not always reliable identifications in roman letters, and the copy of the Matricula in the Codex Mendocino contains a complete series of highly reliable ones. In order to have some norm for spelling, I have everywhere followed these Mendocino versions. There are objections to this procedure—which gives us "Tuluca" for what is better rendered "Tolocan,"—but it shows how one Indian pronounced all the names of the Empire before the corrupting European influences set in.

³ PNE, 4: 165; 4: 198 agrees. Likewise, Tochpan (Tuchpa in Mendocino) has seven towns, and Ixtilxochitl (Obras históricas [1892], II: 197) says that "La gran provincia de Tochpan se dividía en siete provincias." The fact that the initial glyph is often the only one identified in roman letters in the Matricula is also taken into account.

I have included a certain amount of related ethnographic material which has appeared in the course of accumulating data on place names and locations. Names for certain stretches of territory, names of language groups (these two often intertwined), reasons for such names, and occasional remarks on customs or gods form the main part of this supplementary material, which shows the great diversity of the Empire. (This diversity is still present: even today, a traveler in Mexico can see twenty countries in one.)

Here, however, the supplement stops. I have reluctantly excluded every scrap of the historical sections originally written to accompany these provinces. By suppressing an approximate history now, I can give an accurate history later. Nor has it been possible here to touch on the question of government and administration of tribute,⁴ and on the topics of the motivations and formulae of native warfare, all of which need reexamination.

In view of the nature of the authority for this map of the Empire of the Culhua Mexica—a tribute reckoning—it has, however, seemed appropriate to add some data on tribute. These data come chiefly from two sources: the Matricula, which gives the tribute from provinces as units, but not from their component towns; and the geographical relaciones of the 1580's, which often record the kind of tribute from a given town. Here again, I have omitted incidental materials in order to focus on the map. I have treated the Matricula tribute data in a summary fashion,⁵ but have given all other tribute information in full.

THE MATRICULA DE TRIBUTOS

En estos Fragmentos se ve el más auténtico testimonio de la opulencia, grandeza, y Majestad de este Imperio Mexicano.

—ARCHBISHOP LORENZANA

The map the publication of which is begun in this work is based primarily on one document. Since the relationship of this document to its copies and editions has not been worked out before, it is proper to turn our attention to bibliography.

The *Matricula de Tributos*⁸ is a folio manuscript, painted on coarse native paper, arranged like a European book. It is preserved in the Salon de Codices of the Museo Nacional de Arqueología de México and bears the exhibit number 52. Originally it must have contained more than eighteen folios, although today it has dwindled sadly.⁹ On both sides of each of these folios are painted the hieroglyphs of the towns which were subject to the Triple Alliance of Mexico, Texcoco, and Tlacopan, as well as those of the tributes they paid.¹⁰ The Matricula was probably made after 1511 or 1512, as I have remarked elsewhere.¹¹ Its European format hints that it may have been painted for Cortés, who soon had it in his hands and was learning the likeliest fields for pillage. Bernal Díaz tells us: "En los libros de la renta de montezuma miravamos de donde le trayan los tributos del oro y donde avia minas y cacao y ropa de mantas y de aquellas partes que viamos en los libros y las quentas que en ellos tenian montezuma que se lo trayan queriamos."¹² Afterward it doubtless served as a touchstone for taxability. When the first generation of unhappy mestizos was about come of age, the Viceroy Mendoza had the Matricula copied as part of the compilation made to show His Sacred and Caesarian Majesty what

¹⁰ That the Matricula contained records of the tributes of both Mexico and Texcoco is clear from the inclusion of the provinces of Quauhnahuac and Tlalcoauhtlan, with certain subordinate towns which were specifically subject to Texcoco, as Ixtlilxochitl (Obras históricas, T. II: Historia Chichimeca [1892], p. 89) and other sources inform us. It also includes the province of Xilotepec, which with its towns was subject to Tlacopan specifically ("La orden que tenian los indios . . .", ENE, 14: 145-148).

¹¹ Anderson and Barlow, "The Maize Tribute of Moctezuma's Empire," Annals of the Missouri Botanical Garden (1943), 30: 414-415.

¹² Historia verdadera de la conquista de la Nueva España (1904), II: 144.

New Spain was like. This copy (which is not generally realized to be a copy)¹¹ preserves for us the manuscript as it stood in the 1540's. It is possible that a leaf or two had been lost before that date. Since four leaves have been lost since then, this copy is very precious. This Mendocino copy shows that the Matricula had thirty-six pages and somewhat more (a matter which cannot be commented on here), that is, eighteen leaves plus, at that time. The military history section of the Mendocino was also copied from the Matricula, where only a scrap of it survives. Probably the ethnographic section of the Mendocino was the only one painted especially for it. The manner in which two leaves of the Matricula were lost completely and two were carried off is noted below.

Sometime in the sixteenth century the manuscript was annotated unsystematically in Náhuatl. This must have been after the Mendocino copy was made, for the latter does not take cognizance of these annotations, but provides others.¹²

The Matricula disappears in that neglected century of consolidation, the seventeenth. In the first half of the eighteenth, however, it came into the hands of Lorenzo Boturini, the Italian Guadalupe enthusiast, whose immeasurably rich collection embraced almost every document on which our knowledge of ancient Mexican history is based. In the inventory made of his papers, July 15, 1745, it appears as No. 35 of "Ymbentario 2°."¹² It also figures in the printed catalogue of the following year, § VII, No. 9, where it received the name of "Matricula."¹³

A very inexpert copy of the Matricula, now bound with it, was made about this time. It appears in the "Ymbentario 2°" as No. 36,¹⁴ in the printed catalogue. This copy does not fully reproduce the initial page, which had become nearly effaced. Four pages of this wretched copy were published by Peñafiel, that is, those corresponding with the two leaves carried off to Philadelphia—an event noted below.¹⁵ The Matricula suffered the fate of all Boturini's collection, being taken as part of the evidence of his crime of collecting funds to make a crown for the Virgin of Guadalupe. It lay in one of the secretarías of the Gobieno del Virreinato until 1770, when Archbishop Lorenzana published the first of the editions it has suffered.¹⁶ By Boturini's day (mid-eighteenth century) the manuscript had been reduced from the eighteen leaves plus of circa 1540, to sixteen leaves in the Lorenzana publication. The losses were the leaf containing the provinces of Tlachquiauco (recto) and Tochtepec (verso) and that containing Axocapan (recto) and Atotonilco (verso).¹⁷ Lorenzana's edition is imaginatively unfaithful, being a series of lopsided copper-plate engravings. One page is so wretchedly copied that the "artist" has a vacant space left, which he plugged up with a cherub blowing a trumpet—a very curious item to find in Moctezuma's tribute list. This edition includes the Náhuatl annotations, as well as the Spanish translations which certain of them had acquired in the meantime.

¹⁷ Not Atotonilco el Grande (see p. 64), which is on p. 8 of the manuscript as it exists today.

Sixty years after the appearance of Lorenzana's edition, the original Matricula suffered further loss. Two folios were detached by Poinsett, the American minister of Iturbide's day, who carried them off to Philadelphia, along with a large collection of Mexican antiquities on which there is no report available. One of these folios, half torn away since Lorenzana's edition, contains the provinces of Tlatelolco (recto) and Petlacalco (verso). The other contains Tlatlauhquitepec (recto) and Tuchpa (verso).¹⁹ With this final mutilation, the document was left in its present state, except for a binding which it acquired sometime in the nineteenth century. It has been in the Museo Nacional for many decades, where Sr. Fernando Gamboa has recently devised a setting worthy of it, amid a welter of gold nose-plugs, green feathers, cacao, paper, and the like.

In view of all these mutilations, I wish to state that I cite the present pagination throughout.

At the end of this same nineteenth century, in which the Matricula was at first seriously maltreated, the nobility of the old document was appreciated, and a lithographed edition in heightened colors was published by Peñafiel. This edition partakes of the usual defects of "official" scholarship of the Batres Era and omits²⁰ the annotations in European writing. As recompense, the editor had the prices which he thought the tribute would bring on the open market added up, and published this in many solemn tables.

With the recent recovery of the Philadelphia pages, the story of the Matricula is complete. As there has never been a usable edition of it, I have had to work with diminutive photographs of the original. A good edition and a serious commentary on this document are much needed.

²⁰ As in the unpardonable cases of the Codices Colombino and Sánchez Solís

II. THE TARASCAN FRONTIER

BECAUSE there were many provinces in the Empire which it is our purpose to delimit, some few grand divisions seem advisable. These have been made in a rather arbitrary way, with varying criteria. In certain regions it is possible to point out a particular zone as the special sphere of influence of some one or another member of the Triple Alliance. The six provinces described below, however, have been grouped on the basis of their common enemy and peril, the Purépecha or Tarascans, against whom they formed a long frontier. Brand has published a useful map of the Tarascan dominions and their fortified towns facing the Mexica, from the Río de las Balsas north.¹

I. CIHUATLÁN

SOURCES OF THE MAP

On the sixteenth page of the Matricula and on folio 38^r of the Codex Mendocino appear the twelve towns of the most westerly province of the Empire we are about to depict. This province, now the "Costa Grande" of Guerrero, extends west of Acapulco to the outlet of the Río de las Balsas. In the Matricula, seven of the towns are identified by annotations in roman letters; in the Mendocino, all are. The province of Cihuatlan was in a region which is wretchedly mapped to this day, where half the place names seem to have disappeared. If it were not for a "Relación de los pueblos que visitó Gaspar Xuarez en la provincia de Cacatula," of the mid-sixteenth century, the present map would scarcely be possible. There is supplementary information in the relación of Zacatula itself, dating from the 1580's, which the writer has published from a nineteenth-century copy—the original remaining unpublished and apparently unpublishable, for some mysterious reason known only to its present guardians.

Since this relación was available only after the printing of the map, two or three inconsistencies between map and text have inevitably resulted.

The "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet

“Ciudad de México,” has been used as the skeleton of the present map; the filling-in has come largely from Xuarez’ report. Towns which have been identified are given below, the left-hand column containing their names as written in the Codex Mendocino and the right-hand column containing the equivalents when present on the modern map. The number following each name indicates the location of the town on the accompanying map (at the back of this book). A question mark in parentheses means that the location of the town is uncertain.

Cihuatlan, 9 [sic]	[See Remarks on Towns]

Aside from doubtfully identified Apancalecan, two pueblos of the Mendocino list remain entirely unidentified. These are Colima and Coçohuipilecan. This Colima can hardly be the Colima of the modern state of the same name, because of the distances involved. Coçohuipilecan, however, appears as “Coçohuipillan” in the conquest list of Ahuizotl, among other names of this province.

For reasons explained below, to these towns from the Matricula and its Mendocino copy may be added the pueblos of Acapulco (13), Ane-cuilco (12), and Citzaltomaua (11).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Acapulco, like Coçohuipilecan, is one of the towns conquered by Ahuizotl. Its absence from the tribute list is due to its slight importance in aboriginal days—to nonseafarers the celebrated port facilities meant nothing at all. It is even possible that the tribute list may refer to an Acapulco near Zácatula, mentioned in the relación of that town, in which case Yopitzinco may have extended farther west along the coast.

Anecuilco (near Çeuctla) is added on the authority of the sixteenth-century relación of this and of the following town. (These two are included in the province of Çihuatlán somewhat arbitrarily, in the interest of symmetrical disposition.) Anecuilco and its companion Citlaltomaua "tributaban al rrey que era de Mexico que se llamava Montecuma."⁶ It lay behind the high mountains east of Citlaltomaua (whose location is considered below), eight leagues of "muy mal camino ... de muchas bueltas" distant.⁷ The river upon which it was situated sprang from the sierra of Tlacatepetl, taking the name of Xiquipila in its lower reaches from another pueblo on its banks, and emptying in the southeast into the "playa y boca que disen de Naguilan." A tributary of this river was called the Nexatl.⁸ All of these names save that of the sierra Tlacatepetl have disappeared. However, since Citlaltomaua lay on the Río Coyuca (as appears below), this other river springing from the Tlacatepetl must be the present Río Papagallo. The Río Sabana, which is the only other possibility, has a source nearer the coast than the sierra mentioned. The rest of Anecuilco's location depends on that of Citlaltomaua.

Apancalecan may be either the Atenchancaleca of Gaspar Xuarez,⁹ two leagues from "the Villa" (Zacatula), or Echancaleca (No. 863 of the same document), one league from the Villa. (All three names mean "Place of the Owners of Houses by the Sea.") In any case, like Zacatula, it appears too far east on the accompanying map.

Citlaltomaua was eight leagues from the sea, seven from Coyuca de Benítez (d) and seventeen "leguas de muy malos caminos de Acapulco, azia el sueste." It lay to the south of the high and broken mountains of the Tlacatepetl. Two leagues below it a river was formed which emptied "en la mar del sur en la playa que disen de Coyuca." An estancia of Citlaltomaua, the only one of these names (except for the sierra of Tlacatepetl) which can be found today, lay about "una legua hazia el nacimiento del sol." This was called Tepetiztla (c)¹⁰ and appears as "Tepetixtla" on some maps today, others giving it as "Tepetlixpa."

⁶ PNE, 6: 158.

⁷ PNE, 6: 165.

⁸ PNE, 6: 160.

⁹ PNE, 1: No. 854.

¹⁰ PNE, 6: 155-159.

Coyucac is probably not the Coyuca de Benítez of today, but the one described by Xuarez as twenty-five leagues from Zacatula, near the sea, and adjacent to *Axapoteca*⁷ (which in turn is adjacent to Xolochiuyan and Panotlán, q.v.).⁸ This is the only Coyuca he describes in his report on his tour of the coast. Today it is called Coyuquilla.

Nochcoc is certainly the present Nuxco, also described by Xuarez.⁹

Panotlán is mentioned by Xuarez both as "Panutla" and as "Pamutla."¹⁰ He places it at thirty leagues from the Villa and one league from the sea, confining with Çihautlán and Nochcoc. This rules out the present Pantla, west of the Río Ixtapa.

Petlatlán is one of the few surviving names, appearing today as Petatlán. It is given by Xuarez as twenty leagues from the Villa.¹¹

Xihuacan has vanished. Xuarez places it nineteen leagues from the Villa and adjacent to Petlatlán and Cihuatanejo—both well-established places. He adds, "tiene en su termino una laguna de mucha pezqueria y donde se haze sal en cantidad."¹² This salty lagoon suggests the Salinas de Potosí, southwest of Petatlán on the "Millionth Map."

Xolochiuhyan, described by Xuarez as "Solochuca" and also as "Cholochuca"¹³ and placed twenty-two leagues from the Villa, near the sea, has become Jolochuca of today, another of the towns of this province which may be definitely localized.

According to the writer's chronological study and the "Relación de Zacatula," Xolochiuhyan was the scene of Ahuizotl's first breakthrough to the coast and became his "frontier"—against whom, is doubtful.

Yztapan is given as the name of two towns by Xuarez. One¹⁴ belonged to the encomendero, Anton Sánchez the younger, and was seventeen leagues from the Villa. The other, belonging to His Majesty, was thirteen leagues from the Villa,¹⁵ close to the sea, and two leagues from the "Puerto de Çiguatanejo." Thus the pueblo belonging to Sánchez was right at the Bay of Cihuatenejo, and it appears there in a manuscript map of circa 1760.¹⁰ The other pueblo, His Majesty's, appears on the "Guerrero State Map" of the atlas of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento, being situated on the Río Rincon. By means of the Salinas de Camotlán, which appear on both this latter map and the "Millionth Map," we see that this Río Rincon is the Río Ixtapan of the "Millionth Map," though the pueblo is omitted here. It is this Ixtapan belonging to His Majesty which has been selected as probably identical with the pre-Hispanic town, both because it gave its name to the Río and Punta de Iztapa (a), a promontory which may be found on most maps, and because it was reserved for His Majesty, a fact implying a special desirability and importance.

Cacatulan lay one league south of modern Zacatula, near the mouth of the Río de las Balsas. (On the accompanying map, it appears too far east.)

Çihuatlan (Çiguatlan de Salzedo and Panotlan), which gave its name to the province, is missing from all available maps. It might have been any of three vanished towns, but the one which seems most probable is Çiguatlan de Salzedo. This lay thirty leagues from Zacatula, near the sea, and bordering Pamutla and Nusco—the modern Nuxco, near Tecpan. Çiguatlan and Panutla, or Pamutla, lay on the same river five leagues from Tecpan.¹¹ Judging by the distances east of Zacatula assigned to other localizable towns (Jolochuca, 22; Coyuca—Coyuquilla—28; Nuxco, 33; and Tecpan, 35), this river is the modern San Luís. Çiguatlan de Salzedo may be San Luís de la Loma today. In any case, according to the relación of Zacatula, Çiguatlan was divided from Panotlan only by a river ("entre estos dos pueblos está el río"). For that reason, it has been given the same number, 9.

Çiguatlan de Salzedo lay right in the middle of the province, which is the writer's reason for identifying it as the old cabecera, despite the claims of two remoter homonyms.¹²

¹² The other possibilities are Çigua (PNE, 1: No. 864) and Çiguatlan de Su Magestad (PNE, 1. No. 883). Çigua extended between Zacatula and the sea. Çiguatlan de Su Magestad lay seventeen leagues from the Villa and four from the sea. (It bordered

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—There is little material available on the languages, although Zacatula is said to have been "idioma por si,"¹⁰ and in the northeastern prolongation Tepuzteco was spoken by the people of Citlaltomaua and Anecuilco. The inhabitants called themselves Tepuztecas, which meant "people from a place of abundant copper."¹¹ Other Tepuzteco villages are noted in the section on Tepequacuilco, below. It will be observed that this Tepuzteco is adjacent to the equally unknown Yope. In Tepetiztla and other near-by places, however, a tongue that was not Tepuzteco was spoken.¹² Between the western and eastern extremes of this province there may well have been intrusions of Tarascan and Cuitlatec, presumed to have been spoken along the northwest and northeast, in territory extending as far as the borders of Tepuzteco. (It is reported that there was a region of mingled Cuitlatec and Tepuzteco five leagues west of Citlaltomaua.)¹³

Besides Tepuzteco and Cuitlatec, a mosaic of vanished languages underlay the (pre-Mexican) Nahuatl of the province, according to the "Relación de Zacatula." The data of this relación are presented acceptably on Brand's map.

Of Cuitlatec a few fragments have been preserved, owing to the initiative of P. R. Hendrichs. It is definitely stated that this language was spoken in Axochitlan, and it still survives faintly in the memory

Coyutla and Piquitla [PNE, 1: No. 877]; the latter lay one and one-half leagues from the sea and fourteen from Zacatula, in the mountains of southern Michoacan. Against Cigua are two facts: It lay at the far border of the known towns of the province, and it had only eleven Indians in Xuarez' time. However, the Conquest was severe and it did join colonially important Zacatula and the vast archaeological zone of Melchor Ocampo (Tlalocan, 2: 259, notes 3 and 4). Against Ciguatlan de Su Magestad is its even greater distance from the rest of the known province. However, it was obviously an important town, since it was set aside for the Crown, and the colonial province of the Motines de Zacatula, according to the relación, reached nearly to Pómaro, Michoacan. Cihuatanajo itself is of course a fourth possibility, since the -eyo ending is Spanish. The whole problem is one which cannot be solved dogmatically at present.

of a few old people of Totolapan (San Miguel). According to the "Relación de Cíatlaltomáu," the area in which Cuitlatec was spoken extended in the southeast as far as vanished Chiantepēc,²³ and fragments have been recorded by Weitlaner in coastal Atoyac.

Provincial borders in 1519.—The borders of Cíhuatlán are as unclear as its linguistic features. Zacatula must have represented approximately the westerly outpost. Somewhere in the pathless mountains all along the north of Cíhuatlán was the border between this province and the Tarascans and Cuitlatec. (The Cuitlatec seem to have been an entity distinct from both their powerful neighbors, Mexican and Tarascan.) A slender link through Otlatlán (modern Oatlán), in the fellow-tributary province of Tepequacuilo, bound Cíhuatlán to the Empire, and to the east lay the never-subdued Yopes.²⁴

TRIBUTE

In the records of tribute presented for this and the following thirty-seven provinces, the frequency of payment is indicated as follows: one asterisk, annual; two asterisks, semiannual. The few quarterly payments ("de ochenta en ochenta días") are noted.

Tribute of the whole province.—According to the Matricula page and its copy in the Mendocino, the following items of tribute were exacted from the province of Cíhuatlán:

CLOTHING

1,616 bundles²⁵ of large orange mantles
2,400 bundles of large mantles of "twisted" cloth

FOOD

80 loads of cacao bermejo

OTHER GOODS

400 bundles of cotton
800 red seashells, like scallops

²⁵ The Mendocino résumé, in Spanish, has been followed throughout this study as a convenient guide on tribute. There are slight inaccuracies in the version it gives of numbers, however; the figures representing single units are consistently overlooked. Here I have corrected the figure from the erroneous "1,600."

Tribute of the component towns.—In view of the poor documentation on this whole province, all that can be gleaned concerning the tribute of the component towns is that Anecuilco and Citlaltomaua gave slaves, who were, of course, captives taken in border skirmishes (as noted in the tribute list for Zompanco in the province of Tepequacuilco), mantles, and gold dust.²⁶

On the fifteenth page of the Matricula, copied as folio 37^r of the Codex Mendocino, are listed the tributary towns of a province situated in what is now north-central Guerrero. They are headed by Tepequacuilco, which is the only town identified in roman letters in the original document, although the Mendocino copy identifies all. There are fourteen towns listed in the copy; the original, however, lacks the glyphs for Teloloapan and Chilacachapan, which have been mysteriously erased. The American Geographical Society's "Millionth Map," sheet "Ciudad de México," has served for the reconstruction of this province. Original and present place names appear below:

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Alahuiztā, 21	Alahuistán
Atenanco, 8	Atengo del Río
Cocolan, 13	Cocula
Cueçalan, 7	Cuetzala
Chilacachapā, 12	Chilicachapa
Chilapan, 4	Chilapa
Huitzoco, 16	Huitzoco
Ohuapā, 6	Oapan
Oztoma, 19	[Missing]
Teloloapan, 11	[No change]
Tepequacuilco, 15	Tepecoacuilco
Tlachmalacac, 18	Tlaxmalac
Ychcateopā, 20	Ixcateopan
Yoallan, 17	Iguala

All these towns have been located. To them we may add a series of border towns of lesser tributary importance, and therefore omitted from the Mendocino. These lay along the insecure west, where memories of internecine strife mingled with that of the prevailing war against Michoacan. The relaciones made to Philip II in the 1580's authorize the addition of these six towns: Otlatlan (1),²⁷ now Otatlán; Tenepantla (9), now Tlanipatlán;²⁸ Tetela (5),²⁹ now Tetela del Río; Tlacotepec (2);³⁰ Totoltepec (10);³¹ and Zompanco (3), now Zumpango del Río.³²

Tonalli imoquetzayan (22)—a conquest of Tizoc—seems to be the modern Tonaliquizaya, and Brand's map adds Tlatlaya (23) as a Mexican frontier post.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Atenango is one of the vacillating name forms like the equally common "Tetela." It is described, not very helpfully, in the sixteenth century, as being "junto a Taxco."³³ Though the "Millionth Map" gives it as "Atengo del Río," the Agricultura y Fomento atlas gives "Atenango del Río" in the same location. Moreover, a sixteenth-century relación³⁴ gives Atenango as northeast of Huitzoco.

Oztoma no longer exists, but colonial "Oztuma," which stood near the original town, left a relación which helps to locate it,³⁵ and a modern investigator informs us that the site is "located twenty-three miles west of Teloloapan, Guerrero, in the municipality of Acapetlahuaya,"³⁶ names which appear on the "Millionth Map."

Totoltepec is a ubiquitous and trouble-making name. There were famous homonyms, especially, in Hidalgo and southern Oaxaca, which are constantly confused. Dcl Paso y Troncoso sought to avoid ambiguity among the many Totoltepes, ancient and modern, by calling the one we refer to "Totoltepec de Guerrero," but alas! there are two even in Guerrero, the other being an estancia of Ayutla, now called Tutepec."³⁷

Yoallan is the conspicuous variant in our list of names. This has become the modern Iguala. In the Relación de Iguala of 1579 we read: "Iguala en lengua castellana quiere decir escuridad."³⁸ "Escuridad" (oscuridad) is the meaning of Yoallan, as we see in the glyph of the town: a circle studded with "stellar eyes." The Náhuatl root is yoalli, "night."

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Of the people, Sahagún writes that they speak Mexican and are rich.³⁹ Tlachmalacac is the most northerly town specified to be "en la provincia que se dice Cuixco,"⁴⁰ but the Coixca-tlalpan—as it was called—must have stretched even farther in that direction, since the Coixca joined Malinalco in an attack upon the Cuauhnahuac [Cuernavaca] after the latter's surrender to Cortés.⁴¹ And to the east it must have extended beyond Tlalcoçauhtitlan in the adjacent province of that name. The latter town again is the last of which it is stated that "esta tierra se llama Coyscatlalpa y la lengua es coysca,"⁴² but the people of distant Texaluca in southwest Puebla remembered in 1580 that they had served their Mexican masters by going to war against the "provincia de Coyxco."⁴³

Other towns of our province listed as speaking Cohuixca in the 1580's are Yoallan,⁴⁴ Cocolan,⁴⁵ Mayanala (14),⁴⁶ and Huitzoco.⁴⁷ Since

Chilapan is given in Sahagún as Cohuixca, and elsewhere as "lengua mexicana ... no tan pulida,"⁴⁹ and since the latter source uses the same words for the speech of Zompanco,⁵⁰ Zompanco may be classified with the Cohuixca towns.⁵¹

Ample texts from the Cohuixca are preserved in the seventeenth-century "Tratado de las Supersticiones ..." of Ruíz de Alarcón.

So much for the linguistic situation in the east. The northwesterly towns of the province of TepequacUILCO were mostly Chontal-speaking: the Chontal were the aborigines there,⁵² against whom war was still being waged in 1519. These Chontal towns were Alahuiztlán,⁵³ Ychcateopan,⁵⁴ Oztoma,⁵⁵ Totoltepec,⁵⁶ and—in earlier times, at least—Cueçalan.⁵⁷ Further material on these Chontales de Guerrero is given in the section on Tlachco.

Between the Cohuixca and Chontal regions, south of Iguala, tongues called Matlame and Tuxteco were spoken, according to an unpublished map by Paul Kirchoff.⁵⁸

It was in the southwest part of the province that this linguistic complexity reached its peak. Tetela was Cuitlatec in speech.⁵⁹ South of Tetela the utterly mysterious and vanished [?] Tepuzteco was spoken in Otlatlan and Tlacotepec.⁶⁰

Provincial borders in 1519.—The frontier to the west may be rather precisely delimited, since we have evidence from a long chain of frontier towns. Let us examine them from north to south.

Alahuiztlán, in the north, used to send help down to the famous garrison town of Oztoma: food and arms and troops.⁶¹ Alahuiztlán had a small town subject to it which was called Iztapa. This guarded a salt mine, well-fortified, from the Tarascans.⁶¹ Nevertheless, there is no salt from this province in the tribute list.

Oztoma itself held the great border fortress of the region, built after the arrival of the Mexicans, to serve as a protection from the people of Michoacan.⁶² The remains of this fort have recently been investigated and described.⁶³

Oztoma figures in the Mendocino (folio 18^r) as one of the garrison towns, under two nameless governors, a "tlacochteatl" and a "tlacatecatl"; and Bernal Díaz refers to Oztuma when, speaking of the garrisons, he cites "... otra capitania En lo de mechuacan ..." (Historia verdadera de la conquista de la Nueva España [1904], 1: 302; see fuller quotation of this passage in note 1 under Çitlaltepec and Tlatelolco Province, p. 128).

Totoltepec was another frontier town, which, besides sustaining a local Mexican garrison, had to send aid to Oztoma.⁶⁴

Cueçalan, in turn, was actively at war with Apaztlá (a) when the Spaniards came.⁶⁵

Tetela lay west again, and fought against the Michoaque and the Cuitlatec of Axochitlan.⁶⁶

Otlatlán had not been in Mexican hands long enough for quarrels with certain of its fellow subjects to have been erased—quarrels originating, perhaps, when parts of the province were subdued and other parts were still resisting.⁶⁷ Nothing is said of the war with Michoacan and its fellow Cuitlatec of the west, but we have seen that "eran de Moteçuma," being, indeed, a link with the uttermost western hinterland, the province of Çihuatlán.

Tlacotepec warred with southern neighbors on the coast,⁶⁸ among them Tecpan—this latter, presumably, ceasing to be an enemy when it was subjugated to form part of the province of Çihuatlán.

Zompango and Chilapan were strong-points on the Yope frontier.⁶⁹

Just south of Chilapa lies Quecholtenanco, a garrison town whose glyph is in both the Matricula and the Mendocino (fol. 17') accompanied by the head of one "Mixcoatl, tlacatectli governador."

Regional names.—The whole eastern part of this former province was known as Coixcatlalpan,⁷⁰ "que quiere decir Tierra de Lagartijas porque ay muchas."⁷¹

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The original Matricula and the Mendocino copy specify the following tribute:

CLOTHING

402 bundles⁷² of mantles *colchadas
 402 bundles of mantles striped black and white
 400 bundles of rich mantles (the drawing is of a Tlaloc-head decoration)
 400 bundles of women's skirts and blouses
 400 bundles of little white mantles
 1,600 bundles of large mantles
 22 warriors' costumes (20 of the common "Huaxteca" armor and
 2 special pieces: one Tiger Knight and one with quetzalpatzacul headdress)*

FOOD

4 troxes (wooden cribs), 1 each of maize, beans, huauhli, and *chian
 200 little jars of honey (quarterly)

OTHER GOODS

5 strings of chalchiuites *
8,000 pellets of unrefined copal and burners (quarterly)
400 baskets of refined copal (quarterly)
1,200 yellow-colored clay vessels (quarterly)
100 little copper hatchets (quarterly)

Tribute of the component towns.—Some idea of the way in which this burden was shared may be gathered from the following details.

Alahuiztlan “davan de trebuto mantas, maiz, chian.”⁷³

Cueçalan gave chalchiuites annually (the string listed above?), besides mantles and other things.⁷⁴

Chilapan gave maize, chile, and animals important for religious reasons (ocelots and eagles).⁷⁵

Otlatlan gave cotton mantles, delivering them directly to Mexico,⁷⁶ instead of to a local depot.

Oztoma, being obliged to support the local Mexican garrison, seems to have given nothing more.

Tefoloapan gave clothing of various sorts and a mineral dyestuff called “tlalcozahuitl.”⁷⁷

Tepequacuilco—as might be expected of the eponymous town—was the presidio from which most of this tribute was gathered.⁷⁸ In colonial times, Tepequacuilco became a famous mining center, and indeed, it lost its importance only when the railroad reached Iguala.

Totoltepec is said to have been another nontributary, like Oztoma, because of the garrison, but it still thought it expedient to send its overlords “gifts” of mantles, chalchiuites, and copper.⁷⁹

⁷³ PNE, 6: 102.

⁷⁴ “Cada vn año vna esmeralda berde que llaman ellos chalchihuitl, davanle mantas y otras cosas que tenyan” (PNE, 6: 140).

⁷⁹ “No llevava tributo por questavan en frontera con los de Mechoacan y sustentaban los soldados que alli tenian, mexicanos, y en el fuerte de Oztoma, y .. algunas veces del año enbiaban presente a mexico de mantas y piedras verdes y ‘hierro colorado’ que cobre” (PNE, 6: 149).

"Tlacotepec gave "seeds" (chian ?) among other items, which are not specified."⁸⁰

Zompanco sent prisoners of war to Mexico as slaves.⁸¹ These must have been Yope prisoners, destined to be sacrificed, like those sent from Anecuilco in the province of Çihuatlán. Prisoners taken on the Oztoma frontier were usually sacrificed in the temple of the fortress, we learn, but if captives were important, they were sent to Mexico to be sacrificed.⁸²

3. TLACHCO

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The province of Tlachco, now Taxco, is depicted on the fourteenth page of the Matricula, copied on folio 36^r of the Codex Mendocino. This province was situated in territory now forming the northern tip of the State of Guerrero and contained ten towns. Whereas the Matricula annotator identified only the town of Tlachco, the Mendocino identifies all towns in roman letters. The present map is based on the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "Ciudad de México." Former and present place names as given in the Mendocino and on the modern map are listed below:

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP

One town has not been identified: Tepexahualco.

We may add the town of Çacualpā (10).

⁸⁰ "Moteçuma enbio un capitán ... para que coxiese el tributo y semyllas que le trebuvavan" (PNE, 6: 123).

⁸¹ "Estavan subjetos a Montecumā ... y le scriba este pueblo de llevarle esclavos de los [que] tomavan en la guerra, y que esto le llevavan en rreconocimiento" (PNE, 6: 317).

⁸² "Relación de Acapetlahuaya" (1579), in PNE, 6: 117. "Dixeron que todos los presos que tomavan los sacrificaron en el templo prencipal del fuerte grande, y si era persona prencipal la que prendian la embiauan a Mexico presentada a su rrey para que alla la sacrificasen."

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Acamilyxtlahuacan apparently underwent the same sort of abbreviation which made "Amacusac" out of near-by "Amacoztitlan" in Quauhnahuac Province.⁶³

Teotiliztacan suffered the fate of other names bearing the prefix teo- from teotl ("divine, godly"), a sacrilege to Spanish ears. The partly synonymous huey ("great") supplanted the earlier prefix here.⁶⁴ In 1581, Teulistaca and Hueyztaca were used alternately;⁶⁵ since then, the name has atrophied unrecognizably to Huiztac.

Tetenanco. Although there is no modern mention of the town, this is presumably the Real and Pueblo of Tenango which existed close to the west of colonial Taxco. Its borders are given as Nochtepec, Ichcatepan, Tasco, Acamistlahuacan, Coatlan, and Tetepac, which enables us to place it.⁶⁶ And the name Tenanco—often interchangeable with this common place name—appears in the Codex Mendocino, folio 7, as a conquest of Moctezuma I, who was prominent in the reduction of this area.

It may be remarked that both Tenanguillo and Cacalotenango lie within the area mentioned.

Tlachco was not the modern Taxco de Alarcón, but somewhat south and lower, the present Taxco Viejo.

Tzicapuçalco was the same town as the present Ixcapuzalco, we learn from a relación of 1569. Anciently it bore still another name, "Pindexo," perhaps applied by the aboriginal Mazatecos who were established in the Chontal region here.⁶⁷

Cacualpan was a conquest of Itzcoatl, according to the historical section of the Codex Mendocino, and, as Itzacualpa, figures among the subject towns which received Ahuizotl after the conquest of Telolapan (Tezozomoc, Crónica mexicana [1878], p. 528).

⁶³ On location, see GPM, p. 178; PNE, 1: No. 37 and 6: 269.

⁶⁴ PNE, 6: 270, has a note on such changes.

⁶⁷ PNE, 6: 94, which also provides its location. Pindexo is said to be the name of the uáxin tree.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The aborigines of the west of this province spoke "Chontal de Guerrero," a language which is commemorated in the place name Chontalcoatlán.⁸⁸ This little-known tongue is distinguished from Mexican, Matlatzinca, Mazatec, and Tarascan, all of which were spoken in the province,⁸⁹ and was still current in the late sixteenth century in Coatepec, Chontalcoatlán, and Tetipac,⁹⁰ as well as in towns of the adjacent province to the south.

Provincial borders in 1519.—Tlachco Province was a part of the Tarascan frontier. To its south lay the hot-country province of Tepequacuilco, and to its north, Ocuilan, both of these also western frontiers. On the east was opulent Quauhnahuac.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—It is clear from the Matricula that the rich silver mines of later fame were ignored by the Culhua Mexica. Tlachco was a second-rate province, as we see by the list of goods remitted:

CLOTHING

- 400 bundles of little cotton mantles, richly worked
- 400 bundles of women's clothing
- 1,206 bundles⁹¹ of little mantles of soft henequen
- 2 warriors' costumes (a Huaxteca and a quetzaltzitzimil)*

FOOD

- 2 wooden cribs, one of maize, the other of chian*
- 200 little jars of honey (quarterly)

OTHER GOODS (quarterly)

- 1,200 yellow pottery bowls
- 400 little baskets of copal for incense-burners
- 8,000 pellets of unrefined copal wrapped in palm leaves

Tribute of the component towns.—Tlachco itself is the only town for which itemized tribute data are available. It remitted men's cotton mantles (measurements are given) and women's skirts and blouses, one from each household. These mantles were paid locally on each of the eighteen fiestas of the year. Maize for tribute was grown on special lands.⁶²

4. OCULAN

SOURCES OF THE MAP

On page 12 of the Matricula and on folio 34^r of the Codex Mendocino appears the province of Oculan, which now forms part of the southern portion of the State of Mexico. Only the cabeza is identified in the former document; the latter bears all names added in roman letters. The map which has been followed in restoring the province is the 1:200,000 map of the "Estado de México," Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento (1927). Original and present place names are listed below:

MENDOCINO	1927 MAP
Coatepec, 3	Coatepec Harinas
Oculan, 7	[No change]
Tenantzinco, 6	Tenancingo
Tequaloyan, 5	Tecualoya (Villa Guerrero)
Tonatiuhco, 4	Tonatico

One town remains to be located: Cincozcac.

To this list the two westerly towns of Zoltepec (2) and Temazcaltepec (1) have been added, on the authority of their sixteenth-century relaciones.⁶³

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Cincozcac is cited by Tezozomoc (Crónica mexicana [1878], p. 528) as Zicozcatlan, a town figuring in Ahuizotl's Guerrero campaigns.

The proper form Zoltepec, from zollin, "quail," has been restored with the authority of these relaciones.⁶⁴

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Sahagún⁶⁵ tells us that "those who are called Ocultecos live in the region of Toluca, on their lands and boundaries. They have the same ways and customs of those of Toluca, but their language is different. They used to practice curses and sorcery very much." The Ocuiltec language is said by Ingeniero Weitlaner, who rediscovered it, to be related to Matlatzinca and Otomí,⁷⁰ spoken near by. Although the Ocuiltec language is supposed to be limited today to the village of Ocuilan and its environs, the writer has found a mysterious reference to it in a sixteenth-century document from the north of modern Hidalgo State.⁷¹

Provincial borders in 1519.—In the final native period the province of Ocuilan, approximating a half-moon resting on its back, was bordered on the northwest by Tuluca, and on the northeast by Quahuacan and the Valley of Mexico. To the east lay Quauhnahuac, and to the south the small province of Malinalco and more sizable Tlachco. Ocuilan thrust out westward into the enemy lands of the Tarascans; Temazcaltepec and Zoltepec are spoken of as situated on the Tarascan frontier.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—According to the Matricula and Mendacino pages, Ocuilan gave the following tribute:

CLOTHING

800 bundles of richly decorated little mantles of henequen
 400 bundles of little cotton mantles decorated with sea shells
 400 bundles of little cotton mantles

FOOD

4 wooden cribs, 1 each of maize, beans, huauhtli, and chian*
 2,000 vessels of white salt

Tribute of the component towns.—Temazcaltepec alone gave military help (not more than twenty men), two or three bundles of the above-mentioned mantles of henequen, intoxicating mushrooms (teonacatl), kindling, and ink made from sap—all this "every time they were asked."⁷² No data are available on the tribute of other component towns individually.

5. TULUCA

SOURCES OF THE MAP

Page 11 of the Matricula and folio 33^r of the Codex Mendocino contain the province of Tuluca, which is now part of the State of Mexico north and east of the Nevado de Toluca (Zinantecatl). In the Matricula these towns are identified in roman letters, one of the names disagreeing with the version given in the Mendocino annotations, which are also present for every town glyph. This divergence is noted below. The present map is based on the 1:200,000 map of the "Estado de México," Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento (1927). Below are the Mendocino names and modern names, in so far as the latter appear on the 1927 map:

MENDOCINO	1927 MAP
Cacalomaca, 6	Cacalomacán
Calimayan, 8	[No change]
Calixtlahuacā, 2	Calixtlahuaca
Metepec, 5	[No change]
Mitepec, 7	Tlacotepec
Teotenanco, 10	Tenango (del Valle)
Tepemaxalco, 9	[Missing]
Tuluca, 3	Toluca
Xicaltepec, 1	[Missing]
Coquitzinco, 11	Xoquicingo

Two towns remain to be identified: Capulteopan and Tepetlhuiaican.

Tzinacantepc (4) has been added to these. It was conquered with the rest of the province, according to the conquest lists of Axayacatl. Another source adds that most of the inhabitants of Tzinacantepc fled to Michoacan, to a place called Tlauilan, the remaining folk making a special milpa in the service of their new master.¹⁰ rrachan y ocote, ques tea para alumbrarse, y tinta hecha del zuma del ocote que se llama en su lengua ocotlīh "

¹⁰ "Los de Zinacantepc ... se fueron á Mechuacán, adonde ahora llaman Tlauilan, y así quedaron en la obediencia del Señor de México, y tomó para sí todas las tierras, y las arrendaba, y repartió algunas, y por ellas le pagaban tributo. Demás de ésto todos los matalcincos que quedaron hacían una sementera para el Señor de México, que tenía ochocientas brazas en largo y cuatrocientas en ancho" (Zurita, "Breve y sumaria relación de los señores," in García Icazbalceta, ed., Nueva Colección ... [1858-1866], III: 221). The exiles in Tlauilan felt the yoke of their persecutors again, for the year following the accession of Tizoc, the Mexicans "hicieron la fiesta en el templo de Huitzilopochli con la sangre de los Matalcincos y los de Tlauila" ("Historia de los mexicanos por sus pinturas," in García Icazbalceta, ed., ibid., p. 253).

Valle de Bravo (12) and Villa Victoria (13) have likewise been added.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Mitepec is given in the usually reliable Mendocino interpretation, but no trace of such a town has been found. On the other hand, "Tlacotepec" (the Matricula version) is well known, and appears in the conquest lists of Axayacatl, who took all of this region. Tlacotepec, therefore, has been placed on the map.

Teotenanco retained its name as late as 1582, as we see in the relación of that year.¹⁰⁰ Most of these teo- prefixes have been dropped, or supplanted by huey-, as remarked above.¹⁰¹

Tepemaxalco appears in 1582 as a town a league north of Teotenanco.¹⁰² In the 1921 census it figures as a pueblo of the Municipio de San Antonio la Isla. However, only the latter (as La Isla) is on the 1927 map.

Valle de Bravo has been added from Brand's Tarascan map.

Villa Victoria is likewise added from Brand.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The name of the province (Matlatzinca) and its people (who did not speak Mexican, but an Otomian language) seems to have come from matlatl, "net." Sahagún tries out various etymologies¹⁰³ and finally decides that "they are called net [people] . . . because when they sacrificed anyone to their idol they threw him into a net, and there twisted and squeezed him in the said net until his intestines came out." The Matlatzinca are sometimes included among the Eight Tribes whom the Culhua Mexica met at the start of their migration. Matlatzinca-speakers were scattered far into Michoacan, where the village of Chalio, northeast of Morelia, was still called San Miguel de Charo Matlatzinco in the eighteenth century. Westerly contacts and migrations were continued in the latter part of the fifteenth century, as has been mentioned above. The most southerly point in which the Matlatzinca have been noted by the writer is Cocolan, in the province of Tepequacuilco, where their tongue was spoken jointly with Cohuixco in the 1580's.¹⁰⁴

Provincial borders in 1519.—The province of Tuluca was a frontier against Michoacan all along its western side. It was during their expansion into this region that the Mexica met one of their few outstanding defeats, being thrown back after penetrating to the shores of Lake Cuitzeo. To the north lay the province of Xocotitlan (a single town and its tributaries); to the east, that of Quahuacan, long Mexicanized; and to the south, Ocuilan, which was separated from Tuluca by the mountain of the icy and sacred lake, the Zinantecatl, now called Nevado de Toluca.

Regional names.—The province of Tuluca was called the Matlatzinca[n] as far west as Temazcaltepec.¹⁰⁶ Since this term is a rather familiar one, the exact boundaries which it includes have not been investigated here.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The province of Tuluca gave the following tribute, according to the Matricula and its Mendocino copy:

CLOTHING

400 bundles of little white cotton mantles with decorated border
 400 bundles of henequen mantles, with designs in red, black, and white
 1,200 bundles of white henequen mantles
 22 warriors' costumes and shields, 2 of them of fine quality*

FOOD

6 wooden cribs, 2 of maize, 2 of chian, 1 of beans, 1 of huauhthi*

Tribute of the component towns.—Tzinacantepc's special milpa has been noted. No other information is available on this point.

6. MALINALCO

SOURCES OF THE MAP

Two provinces are shown on the thirteenth page of the Matricula, which is copied as folio 35^r of the Codex Mendocino. The two sections are separated by a strong line in the original, but in the copy this is so weak as to be scarcely visible, and it apparently was not visible to the annotator. There is no question, however, that we are dealing with two distinct regions, for, as the map shows, they are separated by various other provinces. One other page includes more than a single province, but there the provinces represent contiguous territories.¹⁰³ Here we are concerned with half the page: the province of Malinalco, which is shown on the left-hand side of the original and at the top of the copy. This province, containing two towns, is now a tiny segment of the State of Mexico, southeast of the Nevado de Toluca. The Matricula bears both names, written above the glyphs in roman letters, and disagrees with the Mendocino in regard to one form. The present map is based on that of the "Estado de México" in the atlas of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento; the names of the towns as given in the atlas appear below, compared with those of the Mendocino:

¹⁰⁶ PNE, 7: 16

MENDOCINO	ATLAS
Malinalco, 1	[No change]
Conpahuacā, 2	Zumpahuacan

No towns have been added from other sources, although the subject towns of Malinalco in the sixteenth century are known and probably represent the old jurisdiction.¹⁰⁴

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Conpahuacan is given as "Tzonpanco" in the Matricula annotation. The glyph may be read either way; the name of the modern town, however, confirms the Mendocino version.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Malinalco was a great religious center. It is only recently that the temple there has been excavated. This is a complex structure cut from the living rock, unique in the New World, and in the Old World rivaled by only a few such structures in India. A shrine, entered through a semicircular arch—the open mouth of a stone serpent—is one of the spectacular features of these ruins, which may have been dedicated to the native Military Orders of the Eagle and Tiger Knights. The culture represented in the ruins of Malinalco is attributed to the Matlatzinca,¹⁰⁹ although in 1791 the Matlatzinca language is not mentioned in a "Descripción" of the place.¹¹⁰ The religious importance of Malinalco is probably linked with an episode of the migration story of the Mexican tribe. This is given in several variants, the gist of it being that Malinalxochitl, sister of the tribal god Huitzilopochtli, being a great sorceress, was such a plague to the migrating tribesmen that they abandoned her en route, while she slept. She settled then at Malinalco, and bore a son, whose later attempt to avenge the family honor is a part of the story of the foundation of Tenochtitlan. The ramifications of the name Malinalco lead also into a maze of calendrical ritual, for the sacred grass Malinali was the twelfth day-sign.

¹⁰³ I e., the huge provinces of eastern Guerrero given on p. 18 of the Matricula and on fol. 40^r of the Mendocino.

¹⁰⁴ PNE, 1; No. 346.

It has been noted¹¹¹ that Malinalco joined the northern Cohuixca in attacking Quauhnahuac after the latter's surrender to the Spaniards.

Provincial borders in 1519.—Malinalco lay well embedded in the Empire, with Ocuilan to the north and west, Quauhnahuac to the east and south, and Tlachco to the south and west.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The annotations of the Mendocino, which we are following for our summary of tribute, do not distinguish between what Malinalco paid and what its fellow, represented on the same page, paid. However, the pictures do show this distinction, and from them we gather that Malinalco Province paid the following:

CLOTHING

1,200 bundles of large mantles of soft henequen

FOOD

4 large bins (1 each of maize, beans, huauhthi, and chian)*¹¹²

¹⁰⁹ Cf. Gante, "The Recently Discovered Malinalco Ruins," Mexican Art and Life, No. 2 (April, 1938), and Larsen, "The Monolithic Rock Temple of Malinalco, Mexico," Ethnos (1938), 3: 59-63. García Payón's more complete report appeared recently ("Los monumentos arqueológicos de Malinalco ...," RMEA [1946], 8: 5-63).

¹¹⁰ "Descripción topográfica de la jurisdicción Malinalco," dated July 13, 1791, at Tenancingo: "Los Yndios de toda esta Jurisdicción hablan el Ydioma Mexicano, á excepcion de el Pueblo de San Juan Azingo, que para su governo interior, conserban el Oculteca, de dificil comprehencion para los estraños."

¹¹¹ In the section on Tepequaculco.

¹¹² To get this figure I have followed the Mendocino annotations, which specify 8 bins for Malinalco and the other province together. This I have divided equally, in view of the equal division of the bins as drawn in the picture.

Tribute of the component towns.—If we allot the foregoing equally between the two towns forming this province, we find that each must have contributed as much in produce as was collected from the whole province of Tlachco, in which there were nine towns, and that each must likewise have paid the equivalent of nearly one-third of the tribute in mantles collected from Tlachco Province.

III. THE OLD TEPEHNEC DOMAIN

THE SEVEN PROVINCES which are considered next are linked historically by having been subject to the Tepanec tribe before the formation of the Empire of the Mexica. We know this because the major towns of these seven provinces are listed in a very early colonial document—which will be referred to repeatedly hereafter—as being former subjects of Tlacopan [Tacuba].¹ Tlacopan, of course, inherited these towns when the major Tepanec center of Azcapotzalco was wiped out, a century before Cortés, and brought them as her dowry to the new Triple Alliance. This early document is the only known record which approximates a tribute list of the Tepanec Empire. It is supported—though such support is really needless—by the relación of Tecpatepec (1579),² one of the towns of this region, which tells us that Tecpatepec was settled by a venturesome Indian of Azcapotzalco about 1370.

These seven provinces are not all the former Tepanec domain—we have statements from towns of the Toluca area which were included also³—but they seem to have formed the heart of it, and they embrace the region about which we may be most dogmatic. It is, on the whole, both physiographically and culturally, a geographical entity, a gateway and frontier of the Chichimeca.

7. QUAHUACAN

Immediately to the west of Tlacopan, in the modern State of Mexico, lay the province of Quahuacan. It is depicted on the tenth page of the Matricula and on the copy of that page, folio 32^r of the Codex Mendoza, and includes thirteen towns. The present map is based on that of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento, the 1:100,000 map, "Valle de México" (1937), on which nine towns of this province have been located.

Two other towns have been found elsewhere: Huitzilapa (3) and Tlalachco (?) (2).

Two towns of the tribute list have not been found: Chapolmoloyā and Ocotepec.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Acaxochic, "que ahora es Santa Fé," is located on the authority of Tezozomoc.⁴ It lies southwest of Tacubaya.

Chichicquautla has become the modern Xochiquautla, between Huixquilucan and Toluca. The boundaries of "Chichiguautla" given in a sixteenth-century document confirm this identification.⁵

Huitzilapa, under the transitional form of "Vciçilapa," is referred to in the sixteenth century as being adjacent to Tacuba and as having a barrio called Tamimilulpa⁶—which description applies perfectly to the Huitzilapan of the 1937 map.

Quauhpanoayan has vanished from the map. It was divided between two hills, one section being called San Joan Baptista and the other San Francisco. It was a league from Atlapulco (11), a league and a half from Capulhuac (12), "y de los otros dos á media legua." As one of "los otras dos" is known to have been Ocoyacac (10), Quauhpanoayan may be placed with fair accuracy.⁷

Tecpan has long since disappeared from the map. In the late sixteenth century, according to the 1579 map of Ortelius, it lay south of Teocalhuiacan and northeast of Mimimiyauapan [sic]. Ortelius gives the respective names as "Tequepa," "Teacalhu," and "Mimiapan."⁸ Since Tecpan was within the province of Quahuacan and lay on the path of conquest between Quauhtitlan and Huitzilapan,⁹ it is not difficult to place approximately.¹⁰

⁴ Crónica mexicana (1878), p. 530.

Tlalachco has also disappeared, though it survived in early colonial days as "Talasco"—a pueblo bordering the limits of Toluca¹¹ and Huitzicilapa.¹² Sr. Jiménez Moreno suggests that it be identified with Atarasquillo.

Tlatlauhco I have identified with the modern Xalatlaco. Under the name of "Xalatlauhco" it appears in the conquest lists of Axayacatl, just preceding Quappanohuayan and Ocoyacac, both near neighbors, as we see. Xalli, "sand," and tlalli, "earth," are words that tend to become confused, as is evident in the ancient name form of Tlatelolco, which began as "Xaltelolco."¹³

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—In the province of Quahuacan, Otomi¹⁴ and Matlatzinca¹⁵ seem to have been the indigenous tongues of the north and south respectively. Politically, the whole province was old Tepanec territory.

Specifically mentioned among the towns subject to Tlacopan are:

Atlapulco, 11	Cuauximalpan, 7
Capulhuac, 12	Chichicquauhtla, 4
Coatepec, 14	Huizquilcoan, 5
Tlatlauhco, 13

Provincial borders in 1519.—Quahuacan was surrounded by other Empire provinces—to the north Xocotitlan and Atotonilco, to the east those of the Valley of Mexico, to the south Ocuilan, and to the west Tuluca.

⁸ These places are identified by the writer in his forthcoming chronological paper.

⁹ Cf. preceding note.

8. XOCOTITLAN

Page 13 of the Matricula is divided into two sections, as has been mentioned. The left-hand section contains the province of Malinalco, the right-hand section that of Xocotitlan, with but a single town. The material concerning this one-town province is copied on the lower part of folio 35^o of the Codex Mendocino. In both manuscripts, in addition to the glyph, its name appears in roman letters. Xocotitlan (1) is located on the authority of the American Geographical Society's "Millionth Map," sheet "Ciudad de México," where it is spelled Jocotitlán. It lies in the modern State of Mexico, at the foot of the peak also called Jocotitlán. With Xocotitlan has been placed the town of Xiquipilco (2), a vaunted conquest of the Mexicans.¹⁶ Five estancias were subject to Xocotitlan in the mid-sixteenth century,¹⁷ which probably were under its jurisdiction pre-Hispanically. If these estancias could be located, they would define the frontier a little more precisely.

¹⁷ PNE, 1: No. 799. These are Almolonga, Tlalchichilco, Tlamacualpa, Tlalcuzpan, and Tlaxomulco.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The inhabitants of present-day Xocotitlan and Xiquipilco speak Mazahua and Otomi¹⁸—a fact in harmony with Ixtilxochitl's remarks concerning these people at the time of their incorporation into the Empire.¹⁹

Provincial borders in 1519.—Xocotitlan was a prolongation of the Empire frontier towards Michoacan, exposed to attack from the west and north. East of it lay the province of Quahuacan.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute of Xocotitlan is given as follows:

CLOTHING

400 little mantles of embroidered henequen

FOOD

4 large bins (1 each of maize, beans, huauhtli, and chian)*²⁰

Tribute of the component towns.—Xocotitlan (like the other diminutive province of Malinalco) gives us figures—lacking from most of the relaciones—for the tribute derived by the Mexicans from a single town, and these figures suggest that life under Mexican rule was arduous.

9. ATOTONILCO DE PEDRAZA

The province of Atotonilco de Pedraza (not to be confused with that of Atotonilco el Grande) occupied with its list of towns the verso side of a lost page of the Matricula, as we may ascertain by the copy which forms folio 28^r of the Mendocino.²¹ It consisted of seven pueblos, of which only the cabecera survives with its original name. Despite the plethora of Atotonilcos, we may be sure of the location of this particular town and of its corresponding province because references to one other pueblo listed, Otlazpan, have been found in old documents. The province of Atotonilco de Pedraza comprised small segments of the north-central part of modern Mexico State and southwest Hidalgo. The map of Ortelius of 1579 has provided a few hints for the present one, as follows:

MENDOCINO	ORTELIUS, 1579
Atotonilco, 4	[No change]
Otlazpā, 1	Hatlaspa

Five of the towns, however, have vanished utterly and inexplicably. These are: Acocolco, Guapalcalco, Queçalmacā, Tehuehuec, and Xalac.

To compensate in a measure for these losses we may add two towns: Apaxco (3) and Tepoxic (2).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Apaxco is one of the towns subject to the Tepaneca of Tlacopan.

Atotonilco, still bearing its not very distinguished name, survives today; it is situated some twenty kilometers southeast of Tula. It has been given the arbitrary "apellido" of Pedraza in the present work, for ready identification. Maese Diego de Pedraza and, later, his son Melchor were encomenderos of the town in the sixteenth century.²²

Otlazpan is a difficult problem, but one which must be solved so far as possible, since this and Atotonilco de Pedraza are the only two towns indicated on folio 28^r of the Mendocino which can be found, and Atotonilcos are confusingly abundant. Otlazpan appears on at least one early map, and it has been possible to unearth various references to it, some of as recent a date as 1800. It may be located with reasonable certainty, yet there is no clear evidence as to what happened to it.²³

²² PNE, 1: No. 1.

²³ The "Anales de Quauhtitlan" (Walter Lehmann, Die Geschichte der Königreiche von Colhuacan und Mexico [1928], vss. 470, 481, 629, etc.) cite it various times. The Codex Osuna (1878) gives its glyph (fol. 497-35), together with that of Tepoxic and the legend "otlazpā, yhua tepoxic ce comēdero" ("Otlazpan and Tepoxic, one encomendero"). A little-known codex, the Mariano Jiménez (1904), lists the salaries of the officials of Otlazpan in 1549. On the Ortelius map of thirty years later, it appears to the southwest of Tepeji del Río. Finally, a whole tome (No. 1201) of the Ramo de Tierras of the Archivo General de la Nación, México, is devoted to land disputes between Otlazpan and a neighbor. This contains documents from the sixteenth to the nineteenth centuries. The Códice Franciscano, written in 1570, cites (p. 15) ". . . otro monasterio fundado en terreno de dos pueblos, los cuales se juntaron para lo edificar y poblar cabe él el uno Tepoxic [Tepoxic] . . . el otro se llama Otlazpan."

The pueblo of Jagueyes disputed certain pastures with Otlazpan; moreover, from the reference to the dispute it is clear that Tepexic, Huehuetoca, and Otlazpan also had a common boundary at a hill called Hueytepec.²⁴ The Codex Mariano Jiménez also deals in part with the limits between Tepexic and Otlazpan. But whether we should place Otlazpan north or south of the line formed by these three pueblos is uncertain. The evidence is slightly in favor of the south.²⁵

Tepexic figures among the towns subject to Tlacopan, in the list we have cited at the opening of this section.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—It would appear²⁶ that the people of Otlazpan and of its subject towns spoke Otomí and the related Mazahua, whereas the inhabitants of Tepexic spoke Náhuatl. This division was accompanied by an enmity the echoes of which lasted into recent times in the form of a yearly stone-fight between the youths of the two towns at a place called the "Puente de las Guerras."

Provincial borders in 1519.—Many of the towns of this province have not been located, but its outline is known from the boundaries of its neighbors. To the north of Atotonilco de Pedraza lay Xilotepec and Axocapan provinces, to the east Hueypuchtla and Quauhtitlan, to the south Quahuacan, and to the southwest Xocotitlan—all provinces of the Empire.

²⁴ AGN, Tierras 1201, last document, p. 6, is a document of the Viceroy Martín Enríquez which bears the date May 12, 1576, and reads in part "hago merced a melchoir nufiez de vn sitio destancia para ganado menor entre los terminos de los pueblos de tepexi y utlaspí y huegetoca en vn cerro que llaman los yndios gueytepeque y en lengua castellana cerro grande a la parte del sur en vna barranca que baxa a vna quebrada grande que ba hazia san bernardino suxete de utlaxpa" Folio 11^v calls this hill "ococacaya hueytepec."

²⁶ According to Léon, Codex Mariano Jiménez, p. 3.

• Regional names.—Atitlaquia and Apaxco lay in the margin of the ancient Teotlalpan, on which we have commented elsewhere.²⁷

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—This obliterated province gave the following items of tribute:

CLOTHING

- 400 bundles of rich mantles
- 400 bundles of mantles with black-and-white border
- 800 bundles of large mantles of "twisted" cloth
- 62 warriors' costumes, together with shields*

FOOD

- 4 wooden bins (1 each of maize, beans, huauhtli, and chian)*

OTHER GOODS

- 400 loads of lime

Tribute of the component towns.—Atotonilco de Pedraza itself seems to have figured in the lime manufacture noted above.²⁸

Otlazpan, in 1549, paid tribute of lime, "mantas labradas con tochomitl," and many other articles, as we see in the Codex Mariano Jiménez. These must be the "mantillas de ricas labores ... ropa que bestian los S[eniores] y caciques." Tochomitl is defined in the "Relaciones históricas estadísticas" (1:228) as "lana teñida de colores la qual dicha lana era conejos y liebres." (Compare with Tepechpa, p. 72.)

10. QUAUHTITLAN

Page 6 of the Matricula represents the once great province of Quauhtitlan, whose annals are so precious to the investigator of ancient Mexican history and ethnology. This page is copied as folio 26^r of the Codex Mendocino. The province lay in the modern State of Mexico, north of the Federal District. Seven towns are listed in this province, the present map of which is based on that of the Secretaría de Agricultura

Quauhtitlan, 2	Cuauhtitlán
Tehuiloysocā, 4	Teoloyucan
Tepoxaco, 1	[No change]
Xiloçinco, 7	Xilotzingo

Two towns remain to be identified: Alhuexoyocā and Xalapan.

On the other hand, we may add two other subject towns to the province: Huehuetoca (5) and Tepotzotlan (3).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Cuezcomahuacan is said, in a document of 1570, to be subject to Tequixquiac; indeed, to be almost one with it.²⁰

Huehuetoca figures in the list of subjects of Tlacopan.

Tehuiloysocan has become Teoloyucan and lies southeast of Huehuetoca. That it is the same pueblo is shown by the 1570 document, which places it "de este dicho pueblo de Guegietocan una legua."²¹

Tepotzotlan is another of the former Tepanec towns.

Xalapan (not on the map) may possibly be the San Lorenzo Axalpan subject to Quauhtitlan.²²

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The rich and complicated history of the region is preserved in its annals, which cannot be summarized here. (Such a résumé may be found in Barlow's review of Velazquez' edition of Códice Chimalpopoca, in the Hispanic-American Historical Review [1947], 27: 520-526.) Quauhtitlan, Xiloçinco, and Tepotzotlan figured eventually among the towns of the Tepaneca, however; and the Náhuatl tongue predominated.

Provincial borders in 1519.—Quauhtitlan lay in the heart of the Empire. To the northwest was Atotonilco de Pedraza, to the northeast Hueypuchtlā, to the east the lacustrine towns, and to the southwest Quahuacan.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Rush mats and seats were a distinctive tribute of the province of Quauhtitlan, which paid the following items:

CLOTHING

- 400 bundles of rich little mantles
- 400 bundles of little mantles with black-and-white border
- 400 bundles of little white mantles
- 62 warriors' costumes with shields (2 fine pieces)*

FOOD

- 4 wooden bins (1 each of maize, beans, chian, and huauhtli)*

OTHER TRIBUTE

- 4,000 petates
- 4,000 rush seats

II. XILOTEPEC

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The province of Xilotepec, which kept its name into the late sixteenth century, contained seven towns, according to page 9 of the Matricula and folio 31^r of the Mendocino. It lay in the southwest part of Hidalgo and in the northwest part of the State of Mexico. In the Matricula, the towns of Xilotepec and Michmaloyan are identified in roman letters; in the Mendocino, all are. The present map is based on the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheets "San Luis Potosí" and "Ciudad de México." Below are the Mendocino names which have been identified with those of the modern map:

MENDOCINO

- Acaxochitla, 7
- Michmaloyan, 5
- Tecocauhtla, 11
- Tepetitlan, 6
- Tzayanalquilpan, 3
- Xilotepec, 2

MILLIONTH MAP

- [Missing]
- Michimaloyan
- Tecozautla
- Tepetitlán
- Soyaniquilpan
- Jilotepec

There remains a seventh town to identify in this province: Tlachco. It is possible that this may be the modern Querétaro, for the Mexican version of Querétaro (more properly "Querendaro" in Tarascan) is Tlachco, as we see in the "Descripción de Querétaro."³² However, it is not really clear that Querétaro is a pre-Hispanic town. The impression given by the relación is that it was founded as a result of the Spanish invasion. And evidence that Querendaro-Tlachco is not the Tlachco of the Matricula is found in the same relación, in the list of "mujoneras" lying between Querétaro and Xilotepec. Tlachco, therefore, remains a puzzle.

We may add a few towns to those of the Matricula, and establish the western frontier of the province, on the authority of the sixteenth-century relaciones: Atlan (9), Hueichiapan (10), Nopala (8), Titilmilpa (1),³³ and Zimapán (12).³⁴

Acazochitla may be found in the Secretaría de Agricultura atlas.

Titilmilpa seems to be the best form for the name which Orozco y Berra transcribes from the same document (in his Geography, p. 258) as "Tiltmilpa." Today it is Timilpan.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The province of Xilotepec was populated by the Otomí. One early writer calls them "barbarous compared to the Mexicans," but admits that they are not nomads like their Chichimec neighbors.³⁵ These "barbarous" people of Xilotepec Province, it should be pointed out, produced the only known codex with an Otomí (instead of a Mexican) text, possibly under the stimulus of their Náhua masters. These unique historical annals for the years 1403-1528 were discovered by Lic. Alfonso Caso.⁸⁶ They come from the town of Hueichiapan, on the very Chichimec frontier, and should afford important ethnographic and historical data when published.

Three of the seven towns listed on the Matricula page are definitely stated to be old Tepanec domain. These are Michmaloyan, Tecocauhtla, and Xilotepec. Two others, which fell within the province but are not on the Matricula page, were also Tepanec: Tula (4) and the unlocated frontier town of Acaualtzinco.

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the west and north of the province of Xilotepec lay the "tierra de guerra" of the Chichimec nomads.⁸⁷ Traders ventured into this region, however, as did Conin, the Otomí pochtecatl who founded Querétaro. East of Xilotepec lay the Empire province of Axocapan, and to the south that of Atotonilco.

Regional names.—The ancient Teotlalpan began immediately on the borders of Xilotepec, with the town of Atitlaquia,⁸⁸ but apparently did not overlap with it.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—According to the Matricula and the Mendocino, the following tribute was extracted from the province of Xilotepec:

CLOTHING

400 bundles of women's skirts and blouses, richly decorated
 408 bundles⁸⁹ of men's mantles
 400 bundles of embroidered skirts
 800 bundles of mantles with a spotted design
 408 bundles⁹⁰ of rich little mantles
 400 bundles of mantles with a red stripe in the middle
 2 warriors' costumes with shields*

FOOD

4 wood cribs (1 each of maize, beans, chian, and huauhtli)*

OTHER GOODS

⁹¹ The only other live-eagle tribute specified in the Matricula came from the province of Oxitipan, also in the north of the Empire.

Tribute of the component towns.—A little more detail on tribute appears in the “Descripción de Querétaro,” which remarks the abject subervience of Xilotepec Province to its masters, the tribute of mantles and game, and the brutality of the tax collectors.⁴³

12. AXOCOPAN

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The province of Axocopan was depicted on one of two leaves of the Matricula which have disappeared completely. It must have occupied the recto side of a leaf between those representing the provinces of Quauhtitlan and Hueypuchtlá, since it is preserved for us in this location in the copy of the Mendocino Codex, folio 27.⁴⁴ Axocopan Province lay in the southwest part of the territory belonging to modern Hidalgo State. Its towns have been located on the basis of the sheet “San Luis Potosí” of the American Geographical Society’s “Millionth Map,” supplemented by the Hidalgo map of the atlas of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento. The equivalents between ancient names and those of the “Millionth Map” are noted below:

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP

Tezcatepec, 9	[Missing]

Despite the absence of many names from the “Millionth Map,” and of some from both maps used, all these towns have been located. We may even add to them the following town: Tezontepec (6).

⁴³ “Descripción de Querétaro,” in Velázquez, ed., Colección de documentos para ... San Luis Potosí (1897-1899), I, 33: “en tiempo de su gentilidad [los de Xilotepec] eran sujetos á los señores de mexico á los cuales adoraban como a dioses ... tributabanles todo lo que podían cada uno ó lo que querían los que lo recogían daban mantas gallinas codornices conejos y sobre esto les apremiaban los cojedores con açotes y otros malos tratos.”

⁴⁴ Regarding the missing pages, see Introduction, pp. 6-7. This vanished Matricula original may be called p. 6A of that codex.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Atenco, now Atengo, is a pueblo of Tezontepec de Aldama on the Agricultura y Fomento map. It is mentioned in a sixteenth-century document as being a league and a half from "Mizquiahuala."⁴⁴ The only other Atengo in the area of the former province is a mere barrio of Tepeji del Río, which there is no reason to choose.

Axocopan was a town the name of which underwent a rapid metamorphosis in the sixteenth century, from Axacuba to Ajucuba.⁴⁵ It may be accurately located from various references: it was three leagues south of Tecpatepec,⁴⁶ two leagues from Atitlaquia,⁴⁷ and bordered "Tetebando" on the east and south.

Temohuayan is missing from the "Millionth Map," but appears as "Temoaya" on that of the Secretaría de Agricultura.

Tezcatepec is presumably the one north of Mizquiyahuala on the Secretaría de Agricultura map. Though this Tezcatepec has not appeared in the early sources examined, and though there is a better-documented modern town of the same name (in the province of Hueypuchtlá), it appears that the homonym was called Tezcatepetonco in pre-Hispanic times.

Tezontepec appears among the pueblos subject to Tlacopan in the list we have cited at the opening of this section.

Xochichiуa is gone, but it once stood one league from Axacuba, to which it was subject.⁴⁸ The direction is not specified.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The cabecera of Axocopan and the following towns were formerly Tepanec dominions: Mizquiyahuala, Tecpatepec, Tezcatepec, Tezontepec, Tlaahuilpan, and Yzmiqualpan. Both Otomí and Náhuatl were spoken in the province, the latter from Chichimec times, apparently.⁴⁹

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the north lay the republic of Metztitlan, whose soldiers fought with Yzmiquilpan. To the east was Hueypuchtl, to the south Atotonilco, and to the west Xilotepec—all Empire provinces.

Regional names.—Many of the towns of the province of Axocapan lay in a region called the Teotlalpan.⁵⁰ This term is defined as “tierra de los dioses.”⁵¹ The Teotlalpan is a term used far into the sixteenth century, by Alonso de Santa Cruz in his Geography, and by others. It does not seem to have been coterminous with the province of Axocapan in the north: Yzmiquilpan is nowhere stated to be inside the Teotlalpan, for example. But documentation is scarce.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute of Axocapan and the other subjects of this province was as follows:

CLOTHING

800 bundles of rich little mantles
 400 bundles of little mantles with black-and-white border
 800 bundles of little white mantles
 400 bundles of women's skirts and blouses
 42 warriors' costumes with shields*

FOOD

4 wooden cribs (1 each of maize, beans, chian, and huauhtli)
 400 large jars of thick maguey honey

Tribute of the component towns.—Some indication of the way in which this burden was divided among the tributaries appears below.

Atenco is grouped with Mizquiyahuala (q.v.).

Axocapan gave shields and spears, henequen mantles, and made nine special milpas for its overlords.⁵²

Mizquiyahuala, together with Atenco, paid one turkey every twenty days, as well as henequen mantles: “... estavan sujetos al p[uebl]o de

Tecpatepec paid henequen mantles and skirts, deer horns, and game, as well as making a special milpa.⁶³

Tezcatepec paid tribute of game, bows and arrows, and deer skins.⁶⁴

13. HUEYPUCHTLA

SOURCES OF THE MAP

On page 7 of the Matricula and on folio 29^o of the Codex Mendocino appears the province of Hueypuchtlá, which included south-central Hidalgo and a tiny segment of north-central Mexico. The present map is based on the American Geographical Society's Millionth Map, "San Luis Potosí" and "Ciudad de México." In the Matricula, only the cabecera is identified in roman letters; in the Mendocino, all towns are. The following have been identified:

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Acayocā, 7	Acayoca
Atocpan, 10	Actopan
Hueypuchtlá, 3	Hueypoxtla
Tequixquiac, 1	[No change]
Teflapanaloyā, 2	Tlapanaloya
Tezcatepectonco, 6	[See Remarks on Towns]
Xicalhuacan (? 4)	[See Remarks on Towns]
Xomeyocan (? 5)	[See Remarks on Towns]

One pueblo of the Matricula remains unidentified: Xalac.

On the other hand, we may add two more towns with certainty to this province: Itzcuincuitlapilco (8) and Tolnacuchtla (9).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Atocpan has become the Actopan of today. Although there still exists another town called Atocpan (southeast of Hueypuchtlá), ours is the subject of the sixteenth-century reports, in which it is still called Atucpan.⁶⁵ Moreover, the "Relación de ... Meztitlan" gives it as one of the towns against which that state made war.

Itzcuincuitlapilco was one of the former Tepanec towns. It appears in the atlas of the Secretaría de Agricultura.

Tezcatepecónco is the interpretation of the glyph made by the Mendocino annotator. It might equally well be read "Tezcatepec." A vanished Tezcatepec⁶⁶ is the only town of this name which is geographically admissible.⁶⁷ It lay between Hueypuchtlá, Axocopán, and Tequixquiac,⁶⁸ two long leagues southeast of Axocopán⁶⁹ and "dos leguas buenas" north of Hueypuchtlá.⁷⁰

Tetlapanaloyan lay "cuatro leguas pequeñas" to the south of Axocopán⁷¹ and "media legua pequena" to the west of Hueypuchtlá.⁷² It must therefore be the Tlapanaloyan of today.

Xicalhuacan is stated to be one league north-northeast of Tizayuca.⁷³

Xomeyocan lay two leagues east of Hueypuchtlá.⁷⁴

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The following towns of this province were old Tepanec dominions: Atocpan, Hueypuchtlá, Itzcuincuitlapilco, and Tequixquiac. The language of the province was predominantly Otomí, but some Mexican was also spoken there.⁷⁵

Provincial borders in 1519.—On the north, Hueypuchtlá was bordered by the republic of Metztitlan, with which Atocpan had war.⁷⁶ To the east lay Atotonilco (el Grande), to the southeast Acolhuacan, to the south Quauhitlan, and to the west Axocopán and the other Atotonilco—all Empire provinces.

Regional names.—The cabecera of Hueypuchtlá lay within the region known as the Teotlalpan,⁶⁷ as did Tequixquiac⁶⁸ and the Tzecatepec we have identified as the pre-Hispanic Tezcatepectonco.⁶⁹

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Hueypuchtlá and its subject towns paid the following tribute to the Empire:

CLOTHING

400 little decorated mantles
 400 henequen mantles with black-and-white border
 800 white henequen mantles
 62 warriors' costumes, with shields*

FOOD*

4 wooden cribs (1 each of maize, beans, chian, and huauhtli)
 400 jars of thick maguey honey

Tribute of the component towns.—Some of the elements of the tribute listed above may be traced in the relaciones of the sixteenth century.

Hueypuchtlá gave game and mantles and weapons, as well as making a special milpa for purposes of tribute. Nets are also mentioned—an unusual item.⁷⁰

Tezcatepec[tonco] provided weapons and game.⁷¹

IV. THE OLD ACOLHUA DOMAIN: THE NORTH

JUST AS THE PRECEDING GROUP of provinces may be linked conveniently as the Old Tepanec Domain, those which we are about to consider belong predominantly to another member of the triumvirate, Acolhuacan Texcoco. The chief authority for this is the chronicler Ixtilxochitl, who tells us in some detail how Nezahualcoyotl placed governors and mayordomos in Cuauhchinanco, Tuchpa, and other towns we shall consider—enough to imply that the whole northeast was under the dominion of the Acolhuaque in late pre-Hispanic days. He explains that these were the towns “allotted to the realm of Texcoco, the other two kings having no share in them.”¹ Though Ixtilxochitl is accused of mendacious nationalism, we may accept his word, inasmuch as such sources as a list of pueblos subject to Texcoco² and the conquest lists of that city-state, which the writer will publish later in a chronology of the Empire, confirm his statements absolutely.

14. OXITIPAN

The last leaf of the Matricula as it exists today (p. 28) deals with the province of Ctzicoac (Mendocino, fol. 55^r). Following this page there was originally at least one more leaf in the Matricula—a leaf which is known only from the Mendocino copy. At this point in the Mendocino appear the words “fin de la parte segunda,” that is, the end of the tribute section of this tripartite codex. Presumably the lost Matricula leaf was blank upon its verso when the Mendocino copyist had it before him, or he would not have written “fin.” The long array of tributaries ended here.

What must have been the recto of the original leaf not only is the end of the manuscript, but also represents the end of the Empire of the Mexica, as far as the north is concerned, for there is but one town

² In the Anales del Museo Nacional de Méjico, Epoca I (1897), 4: 48–51 and Lehmann, Die Geschichte der Königreiche von Colhuacan und Mexico (1938), vs., 1343, among other places represented on this page, and it was the most northerly of the whole vast Empire. This town is marked Oxitipan in the Mendocino copy, which is all we have. The following equation has been made:

Oxitipan, 1

Ojitipa de Mirador

Many other towns must have been reckoned in with Oxitipan, to judge from the figures for pre-Hispanic and colonial tribute, which differ enormously. (Four hundred loads of axi compared with thirty, for example.)

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Though Oxitipan is described as lying eight leagues to the west of what is now Ciudad Valles,³ it is clear that the reporter had his directions mixed. Ojitipa de Mirador is the same distance south, being a rancho of the municipio of Tancanhuitz, in the extreme southeast of the State of San Luis Potosí. The name of a stream flowing near Tancanhuitz is Oxitipan—another instance of the survival of this once important place name. Ciudad Valles was originally the Villa de Santiago de los Valles de Oxitipan.⁴

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Although we have no specific description of Oxitipan from early times, an English pochtecatl named Chilton gives an account from 1572 dealing with near-by areas to the east and north, that is, Tancuaylab and the modern Ciudad Valles.

Chilton writes:⁵

The first town we came unto is called Tancuylabo, in which there dwell many Indians, high of stature, having all their bodies painted with blew, and weare their haire long down to their knees, tied as women use to doe with their haire-laces. When they go out of their doores, they cary with them their bowes and arrows, being very great archers, going for the most part naked. In those countreys they take neither golde nor silver for exchange of any thing, but onely Salt, which they greatly esteem, and use it for a principall medicine for certain wormes which breed in their lips and in their gummes.

³ PNE, 1: No 424: "Confina con Tambolotan"—now a rancho of Valles.

⁴ Meade, La Huexoteca: Epoca Antigua (1942), p. 293.

⁵ Chilton's narrative in Hakluyt, The Principal Navigations . . . of the English Nation (Everyman's Library, 1907), VI, 275.

Chilton later fell into the hands of Indians near Santiago de los Valles (Ciudad Valles), and was threatened with cannibalism, but they feared his leanness to be due to the pox, and spared him. Scalp-taking here is noted by Chilton:

...they take a great pride in killing a Christian, and to wear any part of him where he hath any haire growing, hanging it about their necks, and so are accounted for valiant men.

Native trade connections between the Valles area and distant Xalapa of Veracruz are also noted by Chilton.

In early pre-Hispanic times, Oxitipan was claimed, along with Tulancinco and other towns of the north, as part of the old domain of Xaltocan.⁶

Provincial borders in 1519.—In 1519, the province of Ctzicoac lay to the south; on all other sides, the province of Oxitipan lay open to Chichimec attack.

TRIBUTE

The town of Oxitipan, which probably included various subjects, gave the following tribute in the native period:

CLOTHING

2,010 bundles⁷ of large mantles, each 2 varas long
806 bundles⁸ of large mantles, striped red, blue, and yellow

FOOD*

400 loads of dried axi

OTHER TRIBUTE*

1 or more live eagles, as many as were caught

It is noteworthy that the same items of tribute, though in lesser quantities, were given annually in early colonial days to the Spanish masters of Oxitipan.

CLOTHING

9 "sauanas"

FOOD

30 loads of axi
9 jars of honey
maize

15. CTZICOAC

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The province of Ctzicoac (Tziccoac would be a less eccentric spelling) is represented on the last, damaged page of the Matricula as it survives today, that is, on page 28, the following leaf being lost. Fortunately, this badly damaged leaf was copied and preserved for us long ago in the Codex Mendocino (fol. 54¹). This former province of the Empire of the Mexica, which contained five principal towns, is now divided between northern Hidalgo and Veracruz, together with a small corner of San Luis Potosí. The present map is based on the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "San Luis Potosí," which gives the following equivalents:

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Cozcatecutlan, 1	Coxcatlan
Ctzicoac (?), 5	[See Remarks on Towns]
Molanco, 7	[See Remarks on Towns]
Xocoyocan (?), 6	[See Remarks on Towns]
Ychcatlan, 3	Ixcatlan

We may add Tampatel, near Tantoyuca—Number 79 of the complete list of Empire conquests—and Tamapachco (8), Number 88. These were conquered by Axayacatl and Tizoc respectively. It is probably safe to fill in the map with Chapulhuacan (2) and Huexotla de Hidalgo (4), which warred with independent Metztitlan.¹⁰

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Cozcatecutlan is assumed to be the modern Coxcatlan near Tancanhuitz, though it is mentioned in the "Anales de Cuauhtitlan" along with towns of the Chicontepec area. Indeed, if it fell in Chicontepec, the whole eastern half of this province would be doubtful, and the question of the northern boundaries of Metztitlan, as well as that of Mexican communication with Oxitipan, would remain open.

⁹ PNE, 1, No. 424.

¹⁰ "Relación de .. Meztitlan," p. 113, and PNE, 6, 188

Ctzicoac, which is also called Xiuhcoac, Tziuhcoac, and Cicoaque, is another difficult problem. Meade¹¹ would locate it in or near the present Chicantepec; Melgarejo¹² presents considerable evidence that it is the modern Dr. Montes de Oca, formerly called San Isidro. The writer regards the problem as not yet completely solved, and prefers to indicate both possibilities on the map.

Huexotla de Hidalgo, which carried on war with Metztitlan, had Náhuatl gods and a cacique with a Náhuatl name. Geographic logic and the wars alluded to would place it within the Empire, though there is no absolute evidence that it was included. As the myopic "Relación de Huexotla" speaks only of the local chief, this town may possibly have been an independent city-state.¹³

Molanco is identified by Melgarejo as a "congregación de 159 habitantes en Izhuatlan de Madero." This seems to have been formed from a pre-Hispanic Tecpan Molanco, four leagues distant¹⁴—direction not specified. Tecpan Molanco is probably the Matricula pueblo and is mentioned in the "Anales de Cuauhtitlan." A homonym formed an integral part of the señorío of Metztitlan, according to the relación of that town.

Tamapachco, a hybrid Huaxtec-Náhuatl word, appears in the conquest lists of Tizoc. Since the subjugation of this town is mentioned jointly with the conquest of Miqyetlan (Mictlan), Tamapachco is presumably the modern Temapache. A homonym lying southwest of Aquismón was still called Tamapach in the eighteenth century.¹⁵ We have put the northern frontier in this region at Temapache, though recognizing that Bernal Díaz speaks of a map in Moctezuma's possession which depicted the coast as far as Panuco.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—As in the central Balsas basin, the Mexica could not or would not conquer the hot lowlands. The Río Panuco and its tributaries, the Moctezuma and Chicayan, lay outside the Empire, in territory governed by the aboriginal Huaxtec. Huaxtec was spoken in the northern part of Ctzicoac Province, and Náhuatl (in recent times, at least) in the south.¹⁰ The Huaxtec people, generally speaking, possessed a high and very old culture, inherited from legendary sea-borne founders.¹¹ Sahagún gives voluminous data on the Huaxteca, of which we quote a part:

...they wore their hair dyed different colors, some yellow, others red, and others varicolored... they all had sharp teeth because they sharpened them on purpose; they wore for ornament gold bracelets on their arms, and half-boots made of feathers on their feet, and jade bracelets on their wrists...

together with feather headdresses and fanlike collars. "The defects of the Cuexteca," he adds, "are that their men do not cover their shameful parts with loincloths, though there is a great quantity of clothing among them...."¹²

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the south of Ctzicoac lay the independent principality of Metztitlan, with its old Náhuatl speech and gods. To the east were Arlan and Tuchpa, Empire provinces acquired at about the same time as Ctzicoac, and to the north an obscure "Chichimec" frontier.

Regional names.—Ctzicoac lay in the Huaxteca, a region more properly known as "Cuextlan."¹³ This region is also called "Tonacatalpan," "the land of foodstuffs," and "Xochitlalpan," "place of flowers."¹⁴ One rather corrupt document speaks of Ctzicoac as "Tizcohuacalaotl" ("Tzicohuacaloth"?).¹⁵

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—According to the Matricula, Ctzicoac and her subject towns gave this tribute to the Mexican masters:

400 bundles of loincloths

Another version of this tribute specifies the following annual payments:

CLOTHING

1,800 bundles of mantles for use as carpets, with varicolored stripes plain mantles
women's skirts and blouses
100 bundles of "twisted" mantles, 8 brazas long and 3 piernas wide

16. TUCHPA

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The Matricula leaf containing Tuchpa Province upon its verso was one of the two leaves carried to Philadelphia a century ago.²¹ It is copied on folio 52^r of the Codex Mendocino. The seven towns of Tuchpa Province now form part of north-central Veracruz State. The present map is based on the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "San Luis Potosí." The Mendocino names which have been located appear below:

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Miahuaapā, 4	Miahuapam
Mictlan, 3	[See Remarks on Towns]
Papantla, 6	[No change]
Tuchpa, 2	Tuxpan
Cihuateopa, 5	[See Remarks on Towns]

Two towns of the Mendocino list remain unlocated: Oçelotepec and Tlatiçapā.

To these we may safely add the town of Tenexticpac (1).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Mictlan is "heute ein Weiler bei Castillo de Teayo" (a), according to Lehmann.²² It is called "Miquetlan" or even "Miquiyetlan" in certain ancient documents.²³

Oçelotepec might be the modern Ozuluama, north of the frontier which we give, but this remains to be established.

Papantla claimed to have been independent until reduced by Moctezuma II²⁴—an assertion which agrees with reports of the rebellious conditions Cortés found on the east coast. The jurisdiction of Papantla reached to the limits of that of Xonocla in the adjacent province of Tlatlauhquitepec.²⁹

Tenexticpac appears in the Mexican conquest lists as number 78.

Tuchpa is also called Tomilco (? Tochmilco) in some documents in the Suma de visitas de pueblos ... (PNE, I: Nos. 449 and 525).

Cihuateopa has been located by Krickeberg (Los totonaca [1933], p. 110), who identifies it with Cihuatlan.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Like Ctzicoac, northern Tuchpa Province belonged to the Huaxteca. The south was different. Papantla was, and still is, a focal point of those who spoke Totonac. The elaborate ruins of that region (El Tajín) are the source of much debate; however, they are clearly linked with Teotihuacán.³⁰ As noted above, Papantla was first subjected to the Empire by Moctezuma II, whereas Tuchpa was one of the towns long tributary to the Acolhuaque of Texcoco.³¹

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the east of Tuchpa lay the province of Ctzicoac, to the southeast the tiny province of Atlan, and to the south the provinces which cut Tlaxcala off from the sea. Beyond the northern frontier were the unconquered Huaxtec peoples.

Regional names.—The regional names given under the section "Ctzicoac" are equally applicable to Tuchpa. The south, however, formed part of the Totonac country, Totonacapan.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Tuchpa Province was wealthy, especially in textiles. She paid the following to her overlords, according to the Matricula:

CLOTHING

400 bundles of black-and-white checked mantles

400 bundles of red and white mantles

400 bundles of loincloths

808 bundles³² of large white mantles, 4 brazas long

- 400 bundles of women's skirts and blouses
- 240 bundles of rich mantles in three styles
- 2 warriors' costumes with shields*

FOOD*

- 800 loads of dried chili peppers

OTHER GOODS*

- 20 bags of small white feathers for decorating mantles
- 2 strings of chalchiuites
- 1 string of turquoises
- 2 disks of turquoise mosaic

Another source, which magnifies the seven towns into seven provinces in the "gran provincia de Tochpan"²⁵ (seventy-eight pueblos in all), gives the following version:

CLOTHING

- 1,580 bundles of mantles
- 25 mantles and huipiles
- 400½ bundles of "twisted" mantles; 8 brazas long
- 400½ bundles of thin "twisted" mantles, 4 brazas long

This is summed up as 47,645 articles of clothing, a smaller figure than that given by the Mendocino.²⁶ Perhaps we have here the tribute of the cabecera alone. Servants were also supplied, we are told.²⁷

Still other sources give more details concerning items included in the opulent tribute of Tuchpa Province, among them a kind of mantle called "Tuchpanecayotl."²⁸

Tribute of the component towns.—Papantla paid a tribute of mantles, little peppers, maize, and chili.³⁹

17. ATLÁN

SOURCES OF THE MAP

On page 27 of the Matricula, which is copied as folio 53¹ of the Codex Mendocino, appears a province of two towns, the second such province which we have encountered.⁴⁰ In the former codex, one place glyph is identified as "Atla" (1); the other is left unnamed. In the Mendocino they are identified as "Atlan" and "Teçapotitlan." The town of Atlan appears at the northern tip of Puebla State, in the atlas of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento. Both are listed among the very numerous tributaries of Huauchinango, four leagues distant, in one document which gives Atlan one hundred and fifty tributaries and "Çapotitlan" ten only.⁴¹ Elsewhere both are said to be of the partido of Metaltoyuca (2). In the latter document Teçapotitlan is also called "Valpopocatlan."⁴²

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Provincial borders in 1519.—Atlan and Teçapotitlan were apparently the great Mexican bulwarks of the northeast. These two towns are treated in the same way as are Xoconochco, at the southern extremity of the Empire on the Pacific, and Oztoma, on the west, in that the glyph of each town appears on a preliminary leaf of the Matricula accompanied by the glyph of a special governor, who held the rank of "tlacochcalcatl," or "tlacochtectli," as the Mendocino annotator puts it. Atlan and one other province (Quechaltenanco, in Guerrero) each had but one governor; the five other regions distinguished in this manner each had two.

Bernal Díaz speaks of a garrison which seems to be that of Atlan, when he refers to "... otra capitania ... a la rraya de panuco, Entre tuçapan [? Tuchpa] y vn pueblo que le pusimos por nombre almeria [Nautla], ques En la costa del norte ...".⁴³

- Atlan was nearly surrounded by other Empire provinces: Ctzicoac to the northwest, Tuchpa to the northeast and east, and Tlapacoyan to the south. West of it lay Tototepec de Veracruz, seemingly an independent city-state.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The following tribute was paid by the small frontier province of Atlan to its masters, the Mexica:

CLOTHING

- 800 bundles of rich red and white mantles, bordered in red, blue, and yellow
- 800 bundles of loincloths
- 404 bundles⁴ of large white mantles, 4 brazas long

OTHER GOODS*

- 1,200 bundles of cotton

18. TLAPACOYAN

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The province of Tlapacoyan occupies page 26 of the Matricula, copied as folio 50^r of the Codex Mendocino. It contains the seven principal towns of a province now forming part of northern Puebla State. In the Matricula the cabecera alone is identified in roman letters; in the Mendocino, all towns are. The present map is based on the Puebla map of the Comisión Geográfico-Exploradora (1908). A list of the ancient place names, together with their modern equivalents, is given below:

MENDOCINO	1908 MAP
Acaçacatla, 7	Zacatlan
Tlapacoyan, 4	[No change]
Xiloxochitlan, 6	Eloxochitlan
Xochiquauhtitlan, 5	Xochicuata

These three remain to be located: Aztaapan, Coapan, and Tuchtlan.

To this province may be added: Cuauhchinanco (2), Chila (3), and Xicotepec (1).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Acaçacatla can hardly be other than the Zacatlan of today.

Cuauhchinanco was one of the fourteen cabeceras of the Acolhuaque.

⁴Corrected from 400.

Chila and the near-by, vanished Matlatlan we know to have been tributary, from data given by their joint sixteenth-century relación.¹⁵

Tlapacoyan lies in Puebla. It appears in the official conquest lists of the Mexica along with Itzcuincuitalpilco, Tlatlauhquitepec, and other names of this region. It should not be confused with the Tlapacoyan in Veracruz, northeast of Teziuallan.

Xicotepec was an old cabecera of the Acolhuaque.

Xochiquauhtitlan, a town southeast of Tlapacoyan, Puebla, has been variously designated; its original name, after passing through the sixteenth-century variant of "Suchiguauhtla,"¹⁶ finally became Xochicuacatl.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Cuauhchinanco and Xicotepec were important towns of the Acolhuaque, as has been mentioned above. They seem to have been somewhat unfriendly toward the Mexica. In Xicotepec there exists a curious huchuetl, triumphantly carved with the symbol of Tenochtitlan transfixed by the spear of conquest.¹⁷ Also, there is a codex of Huachinango, which, if it were studied and published, would provide much information on this region. Since the Acolhua influence was strong, it may be assumed that most of the people of Tlapacoyan spoke Náhuatl. The eastern rim of the province, however, was Totonac—"very dumb Indians who don't like to do anything but eat and sleep," according to the severe "Relación de Chila y Matlatlan."¹⁸ The elusive town of Matlatlan probably typified the acculturation of the region under Náhuatl influence, accepting foreign gods and fiestas, but conserving the Totonac language.¹⁹

Provincial borders in 1519.—Tlapacoyan was one of the provinces hemming in Tlaxcala, which lay to the south. West of Tlapacoyan was Atotonilco el Grande, east of it Tlatlauhquitepec, and to the north Atlan—all of them Empire provinces.

Regional names.—The eastern edge of Tlapacoyan entered the zone called Totonacapan.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Tlapacoyan paid the following tribute to its Mexican masters:

CLOTHING

400 bundles of black-and-white striped mantles
 800 bundles of large white mantles
 2 warriors' costumes*

Tribute of the component towns.—Acaçacatla, if we are correct in identifying it with the modern Zacatlán, gave no tribute other than a few judicious gifts.⁶⁰

Chila paid, as might be expected from the Matricula leaf, a tribute of cotton mantles.⁶¹

19. ATOTONILCO EL GRANDE

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The glyphs for Atotonilco and its five fellow towns appear on page 8 of the Matricula and is copied on folio 30^r of the Codex Mendocino. There is an Empire province of Atotonilco which may be called the province of Atotonilco de Pedraza (see p. 37 above), but the one represented on folio 30^r may be named after the town within it which is indicated by the Matricula annotator as Atotonilco el Grande—the only town he identifies on this page. The towns of this province lay in the south-central part of eastern Hidalgo. The Mendocino, as usual, identifies all towns, and has been compared with the modern map (American Geographical Society, "Millionth Map," sheet "San Luis Potosí") with the following result:

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Quachqueçaloyan is given as "dos leguas del mismo Atotonilco"⁵² and seventeen leagues from México.⁵³ As "Tlaquetzaloyan" it appears eight leagues from Hueyacocotla.⁵⁴ It was one of two subject towns belonging to Atotonilco in the sixteenth century.⁵⁵

Çtzihuinquilocá may be located from a literary reference, which places it southeast of Epazoyuca.⁵⁶

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants.—Tulançinco, in this province, was a town of great antiquity, a former center of the Toltecs of Tula, Hidalgo. Sahagún comments on the ruins at Tulançinco in the same breath with those of Tula itself and of Xochicalco.⁵⁷ These ruins have only recently been surveyed.⁵⁸ Tulançinco eventually became an important garrison town of the Acolhuaque,⁵⁹ and it was from this point, according to Tezozomoc's Crónica mexicana (p. 312), that the conquest of the Huaxteca was launched.

Provincial borders in 1519.—The province of Atotonilco el Grande lay between two tierras de guerra. To the north was Metztitlán, and probably a second city-state (Tototepec de Veracruz); to the south was Tlaxcala. East and west, however, were other Empire provinces, Tlapacoyan and Hueypuchtlá.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the component towns.—Atotonilco el Grande, in the mid-sixteenth century, gave six hundred hanegas of maize annually and twenty-six hanegas of wheat. Quarterly it paid twenty-five women's skirts and twenty-five blouses, as well as fish, quail, chicken eggs, kindling, personal services, and a host of minor items.⁶³

20. ACOLHUACAN

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The province which is represented on page 3 of the Matricula is depicted on folios 21^r and 22^r of the Codex Mendocino copy. It contained twenty-six pueblos worth enumerating. Several of the glyphs are almost obliterated in the Matricula, which identifies four towns in roman letters. Three of these identifications—Ixquemaca, Ahuatpec, and Cempoala—agree well enough with the Mendocino, which identifies all the towns, but the name of the cabecera is quite different in the two manuscripts. The Matricula calls it "Acolman"; the Mendocino calls it "Acolhuacan." In the ensuing discussion, Remarks on Towns, the problem is considered. This province lay mostly within the territory now included in the State of Mexico, northeast of Lake Texcoco, but projected a short distance into Hidalgo. With the 1937 map, "Valle de México" (Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento), used as base, more than half the towns of this province have been identified:

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Acolman (a) was independent until conquered by Nezahualcoyotl of Texcoco.⁶¹

Acolhuacan is something of a problem. The present paper is hardly the place to pass upon the truth of reports that Texcoco, capital of the Acolhuaque, paid tribute to the Mexica as did any other vassal. But a choice is imperative here: does the glyph which is annotated Acolman and Acolhuacan represent Acolhuacan Texcoco?

The answer is a certain no. It is doubtful that Texcoco ever paid the famous tribute, in the first place. The other member of the Triple Alliance, Tlacopan, does not figure as a tributary anywhere in the Matricula, and it was less powerful than the domain of Nezahualpilli. The Mendocino interpreter has not written Texcoco, nor does the glyph correspond to those commonly used for Texcoco.⁶² And the contradictory Matricula legend has been written over, as if to avoid one interpretation, at least: the word "tetzocatl" has been altered in two places to read "acolmecatl"; that is, "men of Texcoco" has been erased. Further evidence that Acolhuacan was neither Acolman nor Texcoco may be found in the lists of conquests in which Huitzihuitl and Itzcoatl participated.

⁶² Cf Dibble, Códice en Cruz (1942), fig. I.

If the glyph does not represent Acolhuacan Texcoco, what Acolhuacan does it mean? Discarding a vague possibility that it may be Acolman, site of the great monastery,⁶¹ the writer prefers to follow the "Relación de Coatepec-Chalco," which informs us explicitly that Acolhuacan is a former name of Coatlichan.⁶²

The Mendocino adds the name of the tribute collector, or "calpixqui," to the place name: it was (rather suspiciously) "Acolmecatl."

Aztaquemeca (not on the map) lay athwart Cortés' escape route after the Noche Triste. His itinerary, as given in Sahagún and in the "Lienzo de Tlaxcala," reads Tepotzotlan-Aztaquemecan-Zacapulco-Tonanixco, and finally, friendly Hueyotlipan. Aztaquemeca may be the Ixtacamecan Santo Domingo, half a league from Otumba. (24).⁶³

Coatepec Chalco bore a "very special enmity" toward Chalco, to the south,⁶⁴ which is enough to align it on our map with the province of Acolhuacan.

Chicualoapan "and its subjects were subject to the caciques and lords of the pueblo and cabecera of Coatlychan."⁶⁵

Chimalhuacantoyac had once belonged to the ex-province of Chalco, but was annexed by "the province of Aculhuacan, which is Coatlychan."⁶⁶

Epacoyucan, which can be found on the Hidalgo map of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento atlas, was earlier called Tomazquitlac. It belonged to Acolhuacan from a very early date.⁶⁷

⁶¹ For this possibility, see PNE, 6: 213, n. 2.

⁶⁷ "Fran del señorío de tezcoco como dezieren de los chichimecos de texcoco siempre reconocian de sus mayores que llaman el reyno de acolhuacan" (RHE, I: 141-142).

Matixco (Maquixco), southwest of Teotihuacan, possesses a homonym, Maquixco Santa María, northeast of the same center. Either one of these may be the Matricula town. The choice which has been made is frankly arbitrary.

Otampán, now Otumba, was the scene of Cortés' last great battle with "los de Culua" as he escaped into Tlaxcala, the frontiers of which lay near by.

Pachuca (1) at first belonged to the Acolhuaque, and later was shared by them with the Mexica.⁷⁰

Quauhyocan appears in another source as "San Marcos Quacyocan" and "Quauhyoca." It was subject to Acolman, but no further detail is given.⁷¹

Teacalco appears on the map of the State of Mexico of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento atlas.

Teotihuacan, at first a Chichimec republic in the Tepanec sphere, was conquered by Nezahualcoyotl—who eventually had to share it with the Mexica.⁷²

Tepepulco "parte terminos" with Tulancingo, in the adjacent province of Atotonilco el Grande, and Hueyotlipan, pertaining to enemy Tlaxcala.⁷³ Paso y Troncoso has pointed out Tepepulco's close association with Texcoco.⁷⁴ It was in Tepepulco that Sahagún began to gather materials for his vast ethnographic work.⁷⁵

Tetlyztaca may be located from references. According to the "Relaciones históricas estadísticas" (1:151), Tulancingo was four leagues to the [north]east, Tepepulco two leagues to the southeast, and Cenpoala one and one-half to the west: "... los pueblos comarcanos son tulancingo cuatro leguas acia levante tepeapulco dos leguas entre leuante y sur la congregación de Cenpoala legua y media cay acia el poniente." Tetlyztaca lay near Tepechupilco [? now Tepechichilco].

Tezontepec was founded by order of the señor of Texcoco.⁷⁰ There is a homonym in the province of Axocapan.

Tlachyahualco appears in a few references as "Santana Tlachyahualco," subject to Tepexpa. These are not adequate for locating it.⁷¹

Tlaquilpan appears on the Hidalgo map of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento Atlas.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Acolhuacan Province was the heart of the late Chichimec Empire, one of the elements out of which the Triple Alliance was formed. As a consequence, virtually all the towns of the province were subject to Texcoco until the decline of that city-state, when some passed to Mexico. Memory of this change in ownership was preserved in such northern pueblos as Cempoala, Tlaquilpa, Pachuca, and Temazcalapa in the 1580's, as well as in Tezontepec, México.⁷²

We also have some data on the shifting linguistic picture through the centuries. The obscure Chichimeca language spoken under the first lords of Acolhuacan was abandoned in favor of Náhuatl and Otomí, though it did not die out altogether.⁷³ The Náhuatl of Texcoco was considered the touchstone of elegance in the period of the European invasion.

Provincial borders in 1519.—All along the eastern frontier of the province of Acolhuacan lay independent Tlaxcala, a former ally which had become an enemy. The western and northern boundaries of Tlaxcala are drawn roughly on our map. The other neighbors were all Empire provinces: Atotonilco el Grande to the north, Hueypuchtla and the lacustrine provinces to the west, and Chalco to the south.

⁷³ The "Relación de Epacoyuca" says that "los primeros fundadores de este pueblo hablaban lengua chichimeca porque su generación eran chichimecos y después hablaron sus hijos la lengua mexicana y hablan en general la lengua mexicana aunque ay algunos otomites advenedizos que hablan su lengua otomita y ay algunos chichimecos que hablan la lengua chichimeca" (RHE, 1: 141). The relación of Tetlyzata observes: "la lengua es otomite advenedizos de poco aca se fundaron por mandado del señor de tezcoco muy pocos hablan la lengua mexicana" (RHE, 1: 152). On the supplanting of Chichimeca by Náhuatl, see Ixtlixochitl, Obras históricas (1892), passim.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Acolhuacan Province is said to have given the following tribute:

CLOTHING

2,000 bundles of large white "twisted" mantles
1,200 bundles of rich thin mantles, in three styles
400 bundles of loincloths
400 bundles of women's skirts and blouses
121 warriors' costumes with shields ("one fine piece")*⁶⁰

FOOD

4 wooden bins (1 each of maize, beans, chian, and huauhtli)

Tribute of the component towns.—Acolman (a) rendered tribute of henequen garments, in bundles of twenty, every quarter, and maguey leaves for fuel, but, to judge from a statement in the Papeles de Nueva España (6:213), this seems to have been destined for the local cacique.

Cenpoalan at first gave obsidian knives for war clubs to Texcoco. After passing into Mexican hands it gave a canoe annually, and then, in the time of Moctezuma's predecessor, fowl and other things.⁶¹

Epaçoyucan and adjacent towns paid only obsidian knives until Ahuizotl enlarged the temple of Huitzilopochtli and increased tribute demands generally. Thereafter they paid mantles and maize and domestic fowl.⁶²

⁶⁰ Corrected from the Mendocino version 103 pieces, 3 fine

Teotihuacan gave quarterly tribute of thick henequen mantles called "ichtilmatl" and maguey leaves for fuel.⁵³ However, the *Tratado del principado ... de San Juan Teotihuacan*⁵⁴ gives much ampler detail.

Tepechpa preserved the memory, in 1580, of various stages in its evolution as a tributary. At first its people paid their cacique products of the chase, then mantles of various sorts, and finally, circa 1450, a quarterly tribute of cotton mantles (fifty mantles, four piernas wide and eight braças long; thirty-four braças long and four piernas wide; and forty more of tochomatl style) as well as twenty loads of cacao of Xoconochco (2,400 beans to the load), twenty loads of chile, and twenty of little peppers.⁵⁵

Tepetlaoztoc, as we see from the handsome Codex Kingsborough, gave rich articles of goldwork to its first colonial overlords—obviously a continuation of a long tradition.

Tetlyztaca paid henequen mantles "because they are poor people."⁵⁶ se llamava ahuitzotzin quiere decir nutria este fue el que mandó que tributasesen mantas y mahiz y gallinas para hacer una fiesta quando acabó el templo del ydolo que llamauan huitzilopochtl desde entonces comenzaron los tributos deste pueblo y toda la comarca." Cf. n. 81 above for a similar case

V. THE OLD ACOLHUA DOMAIN: THE SOUTHWEST

THERE IS a variety of evidence for ascribing a principal role to the Acolhuaque in the parts of Morelos and Guerrero we are about to examine. A list of towns paying tribute to Texcoco¹ names nine towns of the Cuernavaca area—a situation fully confirmed by Ixtlilxochitl, who relates the invasion of this region by Empire troops and adds, “cupieron á Nezahualcoyotzin con la cabecera de Quauhnahuac nueve pueblos.”² (Some of these nine pueblos are in Quauhnahuac Province; others, however, are in adjacent Huaxtepec.) Ixtlilxochitl also tells how Nezahualcoyotl overran Tlalcoçauhtitlan and placed a governor over it.³

To the nucleus of three provinces (Quauhnahuac, Huaxtepec, and Tlalcoçauhtitlan) which the Acolhuaque certainly dominated, two others have been added (Chalco and Quiauhtepan). Their inclusion in this section is based on inference, a wish to maintain symmetry, the need of avoiding too many subdivisions, and the absence of conflicting evidence. It may be a great indiscretion.

On the nineteenth page of the Matrícula and folio 41^r of the Codex Mendocino appears the province of Chalco, containing six principal towns, which lay in the south of the Valley of Mexico and reached down to the Valley of Morelos. Chalco is a province which presents several problems. Documents are curiously lacking, despite the great pre-Hispanic importance of the province. There is no sixteenth-century relación, for example, and maps of today are not very useful, but on the 1927 map of the “Estado de México” three of the towns have been identified, as follows:

MENDOCINO	1927 MAP
Chalco, 1	Tlalmanalco
Quauhxumulco, 2	Cuajomulco
Tepuztlan, 3	Tepoztlán

² Ixtlilxochitl, Obras históricas (1892), II: 196.

³ Quoted in n. 36 below.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Chalco itself is the first problem, for the same name appears on a preliminary leaf which is included in the Mendocino copy but must have been lost from the Matricula. There were really four Chalcos, and the writer has chosen to identify that on page 19 of the Matricula with Chalco-Tlalmanalco, rather than with Chalco-Atenco. (See p. 128, where Chalco-Atenco figures in the Chalco-Atenco tribute zone.)

Malinaltepec is mentioned in the chronicles of Chalco as a near-by place seized by Moteczuma II in 1508 or 1509.⁴

Tecmilco is not identifiable as a town, but I am informed by Sr. Ezequiel Linares, of Tepoztlán, Morelos, that the name lingers as that of a plain, south of Tepoztlán.

Tepuztlán also appears twice in the codices discussed. Here we probably deal with the well-known town near Cuernavaca; the homonym is dealt with under Huaxtepec (23). This decision is based in part on the existence of the place name Tecmilco south of Tepoztlán, Morelos.

Xocoyoltepec appears in the Chalcan annals as belonging especially to Axayacatl of Mexico Tenochtitlan in 1480: it was near Amaqueme-can (Amecameca) and in 1606 was given to the people of San Miguel.⁵

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The Chalca formed one of the traditionally Náhuatl-speaking tribes supposed to have been companions during the migration period. They were closely related to the Xochimilca, whose territory they adjoined. Until a very late period they challenged Mexican power in the Valley.

Provincial borders in 1519.—The province of Chalco (-Tlalmanalco) faced eastward on Tlaxcala, the great volcano forming a natural

22. QUAUHNAHUAC

SOURCES OF THE MAP

The fourth page of the Matricula shows us a series of towns headed by Quauhnahuac, a name the Spaniards, in an unfortunate jest, changed to Cuernavaca.⁷ This province now forms the western half of the State of Morelos, with a very minor prolongation south into Guerrero. There are sixteen of these town glyphs, all of which are copied in the Mendocino on folio 23^r, with the tribute lists running over onto folio 23^v. The Mendocino annotator seems to have made one of his rare slips, identifying one of the glyphs wrongly, as shown below. The map of this province is based on the 1910 "Carta General del Estado de Morelos" (Comisión Geográfico-Exploradora), on which the following towns have been located:

MENDOCINO	1910 MAP	MENDOCINO	1910 MAP

Three towns remain to be located: Molotla, Ocpayucá, and Yztecpec.

⁷ Bernal Díaz (Historia verdadera de la conquista de la Nueva España [1904], II: 40) speaks of the "pueblo que se dice Coadlabaca [!] e comundamente corronpemos agora aquél bocablo y le llamamos Cuernavaca."

We know from a list of towns in this province which paid tribute to Texcoco that the following towns, in addition to those given in the Matricula, were likewise pre-Hispanic subjects: Atlpoyecan (8), Maçatepec (10), Tlaquiltenanco (13), and Cacatepec (12).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Atlpoyecan is clearly Alpuyeca.

Amacoxtiila is almost surely the modern Amacuzac. A parallel truncation has occurred in the name Acamulyxtlahuacan (Acamixtla) in adjacent Tlachco Province.

Chimalco, the Mendocino version, is corrected to read "Panchimalco," since the glyph clearly shows a banner (pantli) and a shield (chimalli); the Matricula also bears the correct annotation. Moreover, there exists a town of Panchimalco today, and none called Chimalco.

Molotla is said, in a mid-sixteenth-century source,⁸ to be a subject of Xiuhtepetec.

Quauhnahuac. That Quauhnahuac was the big Mexican garrison of the region is evident from Bernal Díaz, who speaks of it as "muy mejor y mayor" than Yauhtepetec. After its surrender the caciques asked his pardon for not having given in earlier, because the Mexicans had ordered resistance and augmented their garrison.¹⁰

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Of the inhabitants, to whom the name Tlalhuica is applied, Sahagún writes: "These tlalhuica are those who are settled in the hot country, and they are náhuas, of Mexican speech; in their land much cotton is produced, and aji, and all other food-stuffs."¹¹

He goes on to say that Tlalhuicatl means "incapable, unable"—a typical bit of native arrogance—and that their defects are that "they go around too much dressed-up, and carrying flowers in their hands"

⁸ Códices indígenas (1933), Codices 12 and 13.

¹¹ Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (1938), III· 132.

and are "muy tímidos y toscos o torpes." This seems to have been a general opinion.¹² Quauhnahuac was their principal town, from which they spread south and into what later became Huaxtepec Province.¹³

Provincial borders in 1519.—The province of Quauhnahuac was surrounded by other provinces of the Empire. The intricate provinces of the Valley of Mexico lay to the north. Eastward were Chalco and Huaxtepec, and in the south Tlalcoçauhtitlan. Tepequacuilco, Tlachco, and Malinalco formed the western borders, from south to north.

Quauhnahuac itself was subject to Texcoco specifically. There was a special room in the palace at Texcoco for storing the tribute of this southern province¹⁴ and even a detailed list of what Texcoco received.

Regional names.—The region is called Tlalhuic, by one source, at least.¹⁵

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The following goods were exacted from the Cuernavaca region:

CLOTHING

1,200 bundles of large "twisted" mantles
800 bundles of little white mantles
1,200 bundles of little mantles "richly worked, the sort the lords and caciques wore"
400 bundles of loincloths
400 bundles of women's skirts and blouses
8 warriors' costumes with shields ¹⁶

¹⁴ Ixtlilxochitl, Obras históricas (1892), II, 180. A plan of the Texcoco palace and its storerooms figures in the Códice Quinatzin.

¹⁵ Códice Ramírez, fol 20. "llamaron estos a su provincia Tlalhuic porque la poblaron los Tlalhuica."

¹⁶ Among these was the "Huaxtec" (Cuextecatl) dress with its peaked cap so typical of the statuary and divinities of that region. In the Matricula it is clearly marked "cetecpanli cuextecatli toztlí," "one yellow Huaxtec costume"—which confirms Seler's identification of the style from literary sources alone. He says, "Ich kein Bild kenne, das durch eine Beschriftung als cuextecatl Devise gekennzeichnet ware" (Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur Amerikanischen Sprach- und Alterthumskunde [1902-1923], II, 603-610).

FOOD

4 wooden bins, 1 each of maize, beans, chian, and huauhtli*

OTHER GOODS

2,000 pottery bowls

8,000 reams of native paper

Tribute of the component towns.—Coatlan [del Río], not many decades after the Spanish Conquest, gave its new masters goods which were probably similar to its former tribute. This was still paid by the old calendar system on four of the fiestas, or "cada ochenta días," as it is expressed. They gave the following:

76 pesos of unrefined gold (tepuxque)
 2 jars of honey
 6 women's skirts
 6 women's blouses

and made four "sementeras" of maize.¹⁷

23. HUAXTEPEC

The province of Huaxtepec, with twenty-six towns, is represented on the fifth page of the Matricula and on folio 24^r and 25^r of the Mendocino. The glyph in the lower right-hand corner of the Matricula page has been worn away, but the corresponding one in the Mendocino may be seen as "Huiçilan." Every town is identified in roman letters in both manuscripts, and the two versions agree except in details of spelling. This province formed the eastern part of modern Morelos State, and the present map is based on the "Carta General del Estado de Morelos," of the Comisión Geográfico-Exploradora (1910). Former and present place names are compared below:

Four towns remain to be located: Atlhuelic, Tehuizco, Tepoztlā, and Çonpanco.

To the foregoing list the names of certain other towns have been added, as follows: Hueyapan (10), Ocopetlayuca (9), and Tetela [del Volcán] (8).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Ahuehuepan: "Entre las Haciendas del Calderón y el Hospital se ven los restos de San Pedro Ahuehuepan y de Xochimilcacingo a la orilla, respectivamente, de dos barrancas tributarias de los afluentes del Río de Cuautla," according to Miguel Salinas, cited in Sotelo Inclán, Razón y Razon de Zapata, Anenecuilco (1943), p. 59. The latter adds that Ahuehuepan existed half a league from Cuauhila, and that its lands were taken away and the town was swallowed up by the Hacienda del Hospital at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

Huaxtepec is cited by Cortés in his Cartas y relaciones (p. 213) as "Guastepeque, ... donde estaba la Gente de Culúa en Guarnición."

Hueyapan was subject to the Mexicans, and formerly to the Xochimilca.¹⁸ Since it was linked to Cuauhtla Amilpas during the colonial period, it has been placed in the same province as that town.

Tehuizco is listed in a sixteenth-century source as being a league from Totolapa,¹⁹ but cannot be found today.

¹⁹ PNE, 6: 7, where Nepopualco [Nepozualco] is located as half a league from Totolapan.

Tetela [del Volcán] has been placed in this province because of its linkage with Hueyapan (q.v.).

Tepoztlán is probably not the “Ciudad” northeast of Cuernavaca, which seems to figure in the province of Chalco. It may be a pueblo subject to Ahuacuozingo, Morelos.

Xochimilcaçinco (see Ahuehuepan, above).

Yacapichtla is a name already corrupt in native days. “Xihuitz acapitzalan” was the original form.²⁰

Conpanco may possibly be Zompahuacan, southeast of Tecpaçinco.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The northern quarter of this province of Huaxtepec was part of the former domain of the Xochimilca, a tribe which peopled the regions south and west of the volcano. Towns definitely stated to have belonged to the Xochimilca of this region are Totolapan, Tlayacapan,²¹ and Yacapichtla.²² It will be noted also that a town called “Xochimilcaçinco” lies in the north-central part of this province.

West and south of the Xochimilca were the towns of another Náhuatl tribe—the Tlalhuica, who inhabited the territory from Huaxtepec to Quauhnahuac.²³

The Xochimilca were Náhuatl speakers,²⁴ and so were the Tlalhuica.²⁵

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the west of Huaxtepec lay the fellow province of Quauhnahuac. North of it was the Mexicanized province of Chalco, once an independent state. To the east were Tlaxcala and the Empire province of Tepeyacac, extending from south of Popocatepetl to south of the other great mountain, Citlaltepetl or Orizaba. In the southeast, a miserably documented region, the province of Quiauhalteopan must have formed the border.

²¹ Durán, Historia de las indias de Nueva España (1867-1880), I, 10.

²² RHE, 1: 225, “los que poblaron á esta villa heran como está dicho de xuchimilco”

²³ See pp. 76-77

²⁴ RHE, 1: 225. The people of Yacapichtla spoke “la lengua . de Suchimilco que aunque es mexicano difieren en algunos bocablos en ser mas cortesano e mas cortes.”

²⁵ See pp. 76-77.

Only in the northeast was there any contact with enemy terrain. There Tetela and Hueyapan are described as frontier towns,²⁸ while memory of conflict with the dwellers of the plateau also persisted in Totolapan and adjacent towns well within the province.²⁹

Regional names.—The zone of the towns specified as Xochimilca, together with near-by Atlatlaucu, was called Quauhtengo.³⁰ South of Yacapichtla lay another district referred to as the Tlalnahuac, in which Tlayacac and Tecpaçinco were prominent centers.³¹

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—In the Matricula we see, and in the Mendocino we read of, the following opulent tribute which flowed to the Triple Alliance from the province of Huaxtepec.

CLOTHING

400 bundles of loincloths

400 bundles of women's clothing

1,400 bundles of large mantles of "twisted" cloth

8,000 bundles of rich little mantles

46 warriors' costumes with shields (6 being fine pieces)*

FOOD*

4 large wooden cribs (1 each of maize, beans, chian, and huauhtli)

OTHER GOODS

2,000 polished pottery dishes of various colors

8,000 reams of native paper

Tribute of the component towns.—Rather curiously, no details are available on the origins of the foregoing tribute, military aid and prisoners alone being mentioned.

²⁸ PNE, 6· 286

Atlatlauca, Totolapan, and Tlayacapan gave no tribute because they were near the frontier, as mentioned above.³⁰

Yacapichtla seems to have made a tribute of prisoners.³¹

24. TLALCOÇAUHTITLAN SOURCES OF THE MAP

Page 18 of the Matricula depicts three provinces, their town glyphs and tribute being ranged in vertical sections. The left-hand section, in which the cabecera is identified in roman letters, sets forth the province of Tlalcoçauhtitlan. This part of the page is copied in the Codex Mendoza as the top section of folio 40^r. The province lay in central-eastern Guerrero and consisted of eight towns, four of which have been identified—chiefly on the “Millionth Map” of the American Geographical Society (sheet “Ciudad de México”). Former and present name forms are listed below:

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Ahuaciçinco, 4	Ahuacuotzingo
Mitzinco, 3	Mitlalcingo
Tlalcoçauhtitlā, 2	Tlalcozotitlán
Tolimani, 1	Tulumán

Four other towns remain to be located: Quauhitechomaccinco, Tepuztitlā, Ychcatlan, and Çacatla.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Quauhitechomaccinco, according to one lone reference, was four leagues from Olinalá.³²

Tepuztitlā may be a Tepuztlān San Miguel, subject to Chiautla, from which it lay eight leagues distant.³³

Ychcatlan was four leagues from Tlalcoçauhtitlan “de muy mal camino de sierras”³⁴ and eighteen leagues from Tlapan, being an estancia of Tenango.³⁵

³⁰ “El señor natural ... fue Montezuma, al qual no tributaban, porque solo le servian en las guerras” (PNE, 6: 8).

³² PNE, 5: 210.

³³ GPM, p. 112.

³⁴ PNE, 5: 250.

³⁵ GPM, p. 104.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages—According to the Mendizábal-Jiménez Moreno linguistic map, Tlalcoçauhtitlan embraced a diversity of languages. Apart from the predominant Náhuatl, areas of Tlapanec, Matlame, and the unclassified Tuxteca are noted. The province of Tlalcoçauhtitlan was brought into the Empire by Nezahualcoyotl, who placed a governor over it.³⁰

Provincial borders in 1519.—West of Tlalcoçauhtitlan lay the province of Tepequacuilco; east of it Quiauhteopan, and to the north Quauhnahuac and Huaxtepec. These were Empire provinces. On the south, however, it gave on obscure and bellicose Yopitzinco.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The yellow earth which gave its name to the province of Tlalcoçauhtitlan naturally figured in its tribute, which was as follows:

CLOTHING

400 bundles of large mantles
1 warrior's costume with shield*

FOOD

100 pots of bee honey

OTHER GOODS

20 dishes of tecoçahuitl, “ques un barnyz amarillo con que se enbixavan”³¹

³¹ Teozozomoc (Crónica mexicana [1878], p. 315) includes among the tribute from the Huaxteca “betun amarillo que llaman Tecuezalin y tecozahuitl con que untan y tiñen jícaras, y ablandan manos y piés.”

Editorial note (C O Sauer). This Náhuatl word may possibly also signify the yellowish lacquer base, prepared from Coccus insects. The intermediate slopes between the volcanic highlands and the Balsas lowland were and are the chief source of this substance, prized in the aboriginal crafts of central and southern Mexico.

This differs entirely from the tribute imposed by the Alcolhuaque on first conquering the province, which tribute consisted of:

- 16 pieces of colored lacquer
- 268 fine picaras and tecomates
- 20 loads of fine cabinetmaker's wood
- 20 loads of copal³⁸

25. QUIAUHTEOPAN

SOURCES OF THE MAP

On the Matricula page depicting three provinces (p. 18), the section extending vertically down the middle represents the province of Quiauhteopan. This section is copied in the Codex Mendocino, folio 40^r, as the middle stripe, but is placed horizontally there. Quiauhteopan Province lay in eastern Guerrero, and may have extended north into Puebla. Of its six towns, three have been identified, the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "Ciudad de México," having been used as point of departure. Correspondence of old and modern names is noted below:

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Olinalan, 1	Olinalá
Qualac, 2	Cualac
Quiauhteopan († 3)	[See Remarks on Towns]

Three other towns remain to be identified: Quauhcomatla, Xala, and Ychcatla.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Quauhcomatla may be the "Tecomatlan" cited in one old document emanating from this region.³⁹ This Tecomatlan appears much later as "Joya de Tecomatlan" and is identified as a rancho seven leagues "Les Nordeste" of Chilapa, to which it was subject.⁴⁰

Quiauhteopan was subject to Olinalan (Olinalá), from which it lay three leagues distant, in a direction not given.⁴¹ It has been placed in the otherwise blank region north of Olinalá. Quiauhteopan figures in the conquest lists along with Tlalcoçauhtlan and Ohuapa.

³⁸ The list is quoted in n. 36 above.

⁴⁰ AGN, Padrones, 16, 108^v. Petatlan is given by the same source as seven leagues east of Chilapa.

⁴¹ PNE, 5, 210.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The Mendizabal-Jiménez Moreno linguistic map indicates great linguistic complexity for this province: Náhuatl, Mixtec, Tlapenec, and Matlame.

Olinalan, celebrated for its lacquer-work, probably carried on that activity in pre-Hispanic times. From adjacent Tlalcoçauhtitlan Province, perhaps only a few kilometers away, "bateas" went as tribute to Texcoco.⁴²

Provincial borders in 1519.—Because half the towns of the province cannot be identified on the maps of unexplored Guerrero, the north of this province is a great blank. It bordered, probably, on Huaxtepec Province in that direction, as on the west with Tlalcoçauhtitlan, on the east with Yoaltepec, and on the south with Tlapan, all of them fellow tributaries.

Regional names.—Somewhere in the dubious northeast began the region known as Totollan.⁴³

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Quiauhtepan was a rich mining region, as is shown by the following list of its tribute to the highlands:

CLOTHING

400 large mantles

FOOD

100 jars of bee honey*

OTHER GOODS

40 large copper bells
80 copper axeheads
1 dish of little turquoise*

Tribute of the component towns.—Olinalan, in the mid-sixteenth century, rendered a sizable quarterly tribute of base gold, cacao, money resulting from the sale of cacao, and sixty little jars of honey (over half the honey formerly paid by the province, according to the Matricula). Besides this, two special milpas were cultivated and their yield was sent to the near-by mines of Ayoteco.⁴⁴

VI. THE OLD ACOLHUA DOMAIN: THE SOUTHEAST

THE ACOLHUAQUE conquered the lands along the southern Gulf coast as well as those of the northern. Documentation is sparse but sufficient. Ixtlilxochitl names Tlatlauhquitepec and Quauh-tochco, Cuetlaxtlan, and Tochtepec all as conquests made by Texcoco, and each of these towns heads a page of lesser tributaries in the Matricula. The "Relación de Cempoalla" supports Ixtlilxochitl and also tells by what means the Mexica later acquired the Texcocan dominions.

Xoconochco, the far-flung southern province, has been added to chapter vi simply because it fits no better elsewhere. It is the only province in this group of five which cannot certainly be called old Acolhua terrain.

26. TLATLAUHQUITEPEC

The province of Tlatlauhquitepec lay in north-central Veracruz, extending somewhat into southern Puebla. The Matricula leaf on the recto side of which it is painted belongs between pages 26 and 27 of the manuscript as it exists today, but long ago it was torn out and taken to Philadelphia.¹ This detached page "26A" is copied in its proper place in the Mendocino, as folio 51^r. Of the eleven principal towns of the province, nine have been located, largely on the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "Ciudad de México." Old and modern names follow:

Two towns remain to be found: Caltepec and Yxcoyamec.

An unpublished relación adds Xoxopanco (a) and Tzotzocolco (b).

The following towns have been added on the basis of other information: Acatlan (10), Tlaculula (11), and Xilotepet (12).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Acatlan was a Mexican garrison town.²

Atenco is probably "Atempan," which was a "cabecera por si en la corona" in the sixteenth century³ and which may be found today on the Puebla map of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento atlas.

Teotlalpan may be identified with modern Hueytalpan, the teo>huey change having been noted elsewhere.⁴

Tlaculula (also called Hueycalli) "fue subjeto y tributaua a Monteçuma."⁵ It seems to have been a major pre-Mexican center.⁶

Tzotzocolco lay north of "Gueytalpan," near Xocopanco.

Xilotepet is cited as a tributary in the note to Tlaculula, above.

Xoxopanco lay five leagues north of "Gueytalpan" and east of Zzacatlan, according to an unpublished relación.

Yaunahuac appears on the Puebla map of 1908.

Yayaquilitalpa was an estancia of Tlatlauhquitepec.⁷

Ytztepec appears as "Ixtepec" on the 1908 map of the Comisión Geográfico-Exploradora.

Yxcoyamec is mentioned as "Yxcuyomec," an estancia of Tlatlauhquitepec, in the mid-sixteenth century.⁸

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Tlatlauhquitepec was a conquest of the Acolhuaque of Texcoco;⁹ its speech was chiefly Totonac and Náhuatl.

³ GPM, p. 9, ENE, 14. 79.

⁴ Cf. p. 23 above. In the present case, the visita of Diego Ramírez gives us a link, if any be really needed. In July, 1552, he is visiting Tlatlacotepeque [sic] and Gueytalpa, "belonging to His Majesty" (ENE, 6. 174). A month later he sets the tribute of Teutlalpa to His Majesty and goes on to Tlatlacotepec (ENE, 8. 153). Further references to the town may be found in Procesos contra indios idólatras, Publ. AGN (1912), 3: 205-215.

Provincial borders in 1519.—This was the northernmost of the three provinces lying east of Tlaxcala and separating it from the sea. North of it was Tuchpa; northwest, Tlapacoyan; and to the south, Quauhtochco.

Regional names.—The northern part of the province was part of the Totonacapan.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute of Tlatlauhquitepec held little variety.

CLOTHING

1,608 bundles¹⁰ of black-and-white striped mantles
2 warriors' costumes and shields*

OTHER GOODS

800 cakes of liquidambar¹¹

Tribute of the component towns.—Xilotepec gave maize, chickens, and liquidambar.¹²

Teotlalpan (Hueytlalpan) gave cotton mantles.¹³

Xoxopanco and Tzotzolco "... antiguamente tributaban a montecuma mantas de algodón," according to the unpublished relación mentioned above.

27. QUAUHTOCHCO

Quauhtochco was one of the provinces cutting Tlaxcala off from the sea. Glyphs of its seven principal towns are painted on page 24 of the Matricula and on folio 48^r of the Mendocino. By means of the 1908 map of Veracruz,¹⁴ in the center of which area this province lay, five of these towns may be identified, as follows:

MENDOCINO	1908 MAP	MENDOCINO	1908 MAP
Ahuilizapan, 5	Orizaba	Tuchçonco, 3	Tozongo
Quauhtochco, 2	Huatusco	Ytzteyocan, 4	S. Nicolas
Totolan, 1	Totutla

Two others remain to be located: Quauhtetelco and Teuhçoltzapotlā.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Quauhtochco figures among the garrison towns on folio 17^v of the Mendocino (see p. 128, n. 1), though no governor is mentioned.

Tuchçonco, though shown in the Matricula as a pre-Hispanic town, seems to have been resettled in the sixteenth century. There are various documents concerning this resettlement, now kept in the Archivo General de la Nación, in Mexico City.¹⁵

Teuhçoltzapotlan was a doubtful name even to the Mendocino commentator.¹⁶

Ytzteyocan, like Tuchçonco, was subject to Cuescomatepec from the sixteenth century on.¹⁷ It was later called San Nicolas Tolentino, then San Nicolas del Gentil, and, finally, Juventino Rosas.¹⁸

Ytzteyocan figures on folio 17^v of the Mendocino, among the garrison towns (see p. 128, n. 1), although no mention is made of a governor or governors.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The troops of Texcoco brought Quauhtochco itself into the Empire.¹⁹ After various uprisings in the fifteenth century, it was finally so well assimilated that it remained faithful to Moctezuma in the Spanish Conquest.²⁰ Náhuatl was the native tongue; what preceded it is doubtful.

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the west of Quauhtochco was Tlaxcala; to the east the sea, from which Quauhtochco barred that dwindling state. Two Empire provinces lay to the north and south: Tlatlauhquitepec and Cuetlaxtlan.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute of Quauhtochco consisted of a narrow range of items:

CLOTHING

400 large mantles

¹⁵ E.g., AGN, Mercedes, 1: 36 and 40 170^v, speaks of "tuçongo, subjetó al [pueblo] de san ju^o cuescomatepeque de la jurisdiccion de guatusco." Dominguez (Coscomatepec de Bravo, I [1943], p. 42) publishes the earlier document.

¹⁶ He first wrote "çolan" and then rubbed it out.

¹⁷ AGN, Mercedes, 1: 36, calls it "ysteyuca," and the same ramo, 18: 305^v, "ystoyuca."

FOOD
20 loads of cacao*
OTHER GOODS
1,600 bales of cotton*

Tribute of the component towns.—Yitzteyocan and Quauhtochco, fifteen years after the Conquest, were paying their Spanish masters what they doubtless had paid in pre-Hispanic times: cacao and cotton.²¹

28 CUETLAXTLAN

Cuetlaxtlan appears on page 25 of the Matricula and on folio 49^r of the Codex Mendocino. It was the southernmost of the provinces which kept Tlaxcala from salt and the sea. It was in Cuetlaxtlan Province, which lay in south-central Veracruz, that Cortés landed. Of the pre-Hispanic centers, three have been located, mostly by the help of documents. The "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "Ciudad de México," has been used as a framework for the present map, with the results given below:

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Cuetlaxtlan, 2	Cotaxtla
Mictlanquauhtla, 3	[See Remarks on Towns]
Teociocan (?), 1	[See Remarks on Towns]

Three more towns remain to be located: Acozpa, Oxichan, and Tlapanicytlā.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Cuetlaxtlan was a Mexican presidio in the final native period.²²

Mictlanquauhtla lay half a league from the mouth of the Río Medellín, according to an unpublished land grant.²³

²¹ According to a document published by Domínguez, Coscomatepec de Bravo: I (1943), p. 31.

²³ Dated April 12, 1575, and preserved in the AGN, Mercedes, 10:61: "don myn enriquez &c por la presente en nombre de su mag^d hago m^{ra} a joan sarmiento vecino de la ciudad de los angeles de un sitio de estancia para ganado menor en termynos del p^o de myctlanquauhtla media legua poco mas o menos de la voca del río de medellin dentro de los medianos en vn cerro."

Teocyoacan is called "Teocinyocan" by another native source.²⁴ It is perhaps an estancia of Zongolica (a), "en tierra fria," called San Juan de Teoyxuacan, two leagues from the cabecera.²⁵

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Cuetlaxtlan, we are told by a Texcocan chronicler, was conquered by that power,²⁶ a statement confirmed by the "Relación de Cempoalla."²⁷ The pre-Hispanic language was Náhuatl.

Provincial borders in 1519.—Cuetlaxtlan lay between Quauhtochco and Tochtepec, which were on the northwest and on the southeast respectively. Northeastward was the sea, and to the southwest was a doubtful region embracing at least one free city-state of the Mazateca,

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute of Cuetlaxtlan, in contrast with that of adjacent Quauhtochco, was variegated:

CLOTHING

400 women's blouses and skirts
 400 small mantles, borders black and white
 400 half-quilted mantles
 400 mantles of 4 brazas each
 400 large white mantles, 4 brazas each
 160 very rich mantles for lords and caciques
 1,200 black-and-white striped mantles
 2 warriors' costumes with shields*
 1 string of chalchiuites*
 400 bunches of quetzal feathers*
 2 lip plugs of crystal, with blue and gold mountings*
 20 lip plugs, light amber, mounted in gold*
 1 hair adornment of quetzal feathers*

FOOD

200 loads of cacao*

Cuetlaxtlan paid cacao and cotton mantles, both white and decorated.²⁸

29. TOCHTEPEC

Tochtepec, the rich and sprawling province which lay in north-eastern Oaxaca, southern Veracruz, and Tabasco, was depicted on another of the leaves which are missing from the Matricula. We know that it should appear on the verso side of a leaf between pages 22 and 23 of the present manuscript, because of the arrangement of the Mendocino copy, folio 46^r. This lost page "22B" contained twenty-two principal towns, a dozen of which have been located on the base of the American Geographical Society's "Millionth Map," sheet "Ciudad de México." Old and modern names are compared below.

Tototepec, 9	[See Remarks on Towns]
Tozilan, 7
Yxmatlatlan, 11	[See Remarks on Towns]

Various towns have not been located. Some of the following, when found, may provide the obscure route to the southern province of Xochonochco:

Ayotzinpec	Teteutlan
Ayoçintepēc	Tzinacanotzoc
Cuezcomatitlā	Xayaco
Michapan, 14 (?)	Xicaltepec
Michtlan	Yaotlan

We may add the following town to the province: Ucila (8).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Chinantlan has been identified with Valle Nacional. The matter is discussed by Bevan. There is a curious division of evidence regarding the relationship of Chinantlan to the Empire. It appears in the Ma- tricula, which is the criterion of the present work, and the sixteenth-century relación says clearly enough that "este señor rreconocía a Moteçuma,"²⁹ but Cortés himself, in his letters, explains that it was not subject to the Empire, and copies a message from his captains there who held out during the Spanish flight from the capital. These write that they were daily at war, during this period, with the Tochtepec garrison.³⁰ A less reliable document also claims independence for the Chinantec.³¹ Presumably they were in reality subject, but precariously so, to Moctezuma.

Puctlan. There were two pre-Conquest Puctlans in this province. One, in the highlands of Oaxaca (no. 5), still exists as Pulta, southwest of Tlaxiaco. The other (a) lay among the lagoons of the Río Alvarado, three leagues from Yxmatlahuacan,³² three from Acula, and four from an unlocated Tlatayan.³³

Tochtepec was a Mexican garrison town, as the letters of Cortés show.³⁴ The "Relación de Chinantla" tells how judicial matters were forwarded to Moctezuma's garrison there.³⁵

Tototepec may be the "Tepetotutla" on Bevan's map.

Yxmatlatlan appears as Yxmatlahuacan, three leagues from Puctla (q.v.).

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Tochtepec was reduced by the armies of Texcoco, as they pushed down the coast.³⁶ The chief language of the province was Náhuatl, but along the southwest both Chinantec and Mazatec were spoken.

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the northwest of Tochtepec Province lay Cuetlaxtlan and its fortress; to the southwest was the doubtful zone of the independent Mazatec. Southward, Coayxtlahuacan and Coyolapan provided another strong link with the Empire, but somewhere along the southeast the province of Tochtepec gave on enemy regions, through which a thin line of fortresses must have led to Xoconochco.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The wealth of Tochtepec was phenomenal. Of the several lists of tribute which we have, the Matricula shows the following items:

CLOTHING

- 1,600 rich mantles, of the kind the lords and caciques wore
- 800 red-and-white striped mantles
- 400 women's blouses and skirts
 - 1 warrior's costume and shield, with a birdlike standard*
 - 1 gold shield²⁷
 - 1 feather standard like a bird's wing—yellow feathers*
 - 1 gold diadem*
 - 1 gold headband, a hand's width and thick as vellum*
 - 2 strings of gold beads²⁸
 - 3 large chalchiuites*
 - 4 strings of chalchiuites*
 - 20 lip plugs of light amber mounted in gold*
 - 20 lip plugs of crystal with blue smalt and gold setting*

FOOD

- 20 loads of cacao

OTHER GOODS

- 16,000 rubber balls
- 100 pots of liquidambar
- 24,000 little bunches of blue, red, and green feathers
- 4 tufts of green feathers trimmed with yellow ones
- 80 handfuls of quetzal feathers

Ixtlilxochitl gives another list for the whole province: what it paid to Acolhuacan when it was first subjugated ³⁹

CLOTHING

- 40 bundles of rich mantles
- 20 bundles of rich blouses
- shields, panaches, etc., of quetzal plumes

FOOD

- 33 loads of cacao

OTHER GOODS

- 2,000 rubber balls
- 400 measures of cochineal

Personal services were also exacted, he relates.

The same chronicler says that twelve pueblos were subject in this province. In a little list inserted without explanation in the annals of Quauhtitlan, Tochtepec and eleven other towns of the province are named, along with these items:

- 20 + 10 + 1 (31) loads of cacao
- 400 [measures] of achiote
- 5 centzonili [2,000?] rubber balls⁴⁰

The agreement between the Ixtlilxochitl and Quauhtitlan lists suggests that Ixtlilxochitl had the latter at his disposal.

Tribute of the component towns.—Even more detailed information may be secured on the tribute of Tochtepec Province.

Chinantlan and its subjects paid gold and cacao.⁴¹

Tlacotlalpan paid cotton mantles (some bearing painted pictures of Toztlan also gave mantles painted with suns, as well as other garments. Dimensions are specified.⁴³

Ucila paid directly to the capital each year a gold shield, an ornament made of quetzal feathers, and two collars of gold beads, for Moctezuma and his wife. These are also depicted on the Matricula page. To the governor in Tochtepec they gave gold, cacao, cotton, maize, chile, beans, mantles, grass mats, and all sorts of fruit. A third tribute each year went to their own cacique.⁴⁴

30. XOCONOCHCO

In the State of Chiapas, at the approaches of Guatemala, lay the coastal province of Xoconochco. The signs depicting this province are painted on the twenty-third page of the Matricula, and the copy appears on folio 47^r of the Codex Mendocino. Of the eight principal towns of this province, seven have been identified, principally on the American Geographical Society's "Millionth Map," sheet "Ciudad Guatemala." Old and modern names are compared below:

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Xoconochco has now become Soconusco San Benito.⁴⁵ It appears as one of the garrison towns (Mendocino, fol. 18^r) with two governors, named "2. Quauhtli Tezcacouacatl" and "Atzin Tlilancalqui," according to their glyphs (cf. chap. viii, no. 37).

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages—The Mayence language Mame and Náhuatl were the native languages of Xoconochco Province.

Provincial borders in 1519.—The province of Xoconochco was one of the terminals of the Empire, and doubtless waited constantly on the east and west. The links which bound Xoconochco Province to the Empire and to remote Tochtepec are not clearly known, but it seems likely that they consisted in isolated fortresses.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute of Xoconochco Province comprised the following:

CLOTHING

- 2 lip plugs of light amber, gold setting
- 2 long strings of chalchiuites

FOOD

- 200 loads of cacao

OTHER GOODS

- 1,400 bunches of feathers, blue, red, and green
- 160 whole skins of birds⁴⁶
- 800 handfuls of yellow parrot feathers
- 800 handfuls of quetzal feathers
- 40 ocelot skins
- 800 rich tecomates for drinking cacao
- 2 brick-sized chunks of clear amber

Tribute of the component towns.—Xoconochco gave, in the early colonial period, three annual tributes of goldpieces, each tribute being comprised of eight gold disks worth twenty-five pesos apiece.⁴⁷

⁴⁵ Nuttall, "Chalchihuitl in Ancient Mexico," American Anthropologist (1901), 3: 232.

⁴⁶ Cooper Clark, ed., Códice Mendocino (1938), 1: 81, identifies it as Cotinga amabilis Gould.

THE ROAD TO XOCONOCICO

The tribute collectors of the Empire reached Xoconochco—which was so far away from the heartland that it paid only twice a year, as the month symbols on the Matricula page attest—by the same route that modern land travelers follow, that is, south and east of the Nudo de Cempoaltepetl. Ahuizotl, at the end of the fifteenth century, invaded certain key places, which linked this province thereafter with Tochtepec. The activities of Moctezuma II filled certain gaps without altering our general picture for this area.

The main centers occupied by the Mexicans to assure the route across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and down the Sierra Madre to Soconusco are indicated on the map between provinces 29 and 30, Tochtepec and Xoconochco. The list, which might be expanded, has been formed from the conquest lists of the Mexican rulers.⁴⁸

The reason why these towns do not appear in the Matricula as comprising a separate tributary province is debatable. They may have been depicted on some page now lost, or the Mexicans may have demanded from the towns only the right of transit.

VII. THE MIXTEC-ZAPOTEC ZONE

IN EACH of the provinces of the vast zone we are about to consider, the cultural and linguistic groups known as Mixtec and Zapotec have flourished. There is some indication that in an earlier period the Mixtec extended beyond these provinces;¹ in any case, they and the Zapotec together provide a convenient denomination for the area, much of which fronted on still "unreconstructed" Mixtec city-states. Other cultures and languages there were, in bewildering abundance, within the same frontiers—Tlapanec, Mazatec, Cuicatec and so forth,—but the Mixtec and the Zapotec appear to have been the most advanced of all, and certainly were the best known to later times.

31. TEPEACAC

Tepeacac was a great bastion, which long resisted the imperialism of the Mexica and later, when the Spaniards came, proved to be the key to the eastern plateau. This cabecera, together with twenty-three principal towns, is represented on page 20 of the Matricula, copied on folio 42² of the Codex Mendocino. The province extended across the center of southern Puebla. Its towns have been located principally on the 1908 Puebla map of the Comisión Geográfico-Exploradora. Original name forms are compared with those of today in the following list:

Four towns elude identification: Atezcahuacā, Chiltecpintlā, Oztotlapechco, and Ycçochinanco.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—Náhuatl and Otomí were the principal languages of this province, though Chocho-Popoloca was spoken in Tecamachalco, Quecholac,² and Quauhtinchan³ Mixtec, in turn, was spoken by groups coming up from the south, some of which arrived in late times, during political upsets in Coayxtlahuacan.⁴

Provincial borders in 1519.—North of Tepeacac Province lay Tlaxcala, with whom it skirmished continually. Its boundaries in the other three directions were less insecure, as it was bordered by the Empire provinces of Huaxtepec on the west, Cuauhtochco on the east, and Yoaltepec on the south. In the last-named direction the frontiers have been placed south of Yzucan and Tepexic, and north of Acatlán and Piaxtla. This choice is rather arbitrary, but in the 1580's Acatlán and Piaxtla remembered former wars with the two towns depicted on the Matricula page,⁵ hence may finally have been integrated into another province in the interests of peace.

² PNE, 5: 20, "en lo que toca a las lenguas, la general desta ciudad y pueblos de su probincia hablan la lengua mexicana ... ecto que los pueblos de Tecamachalco y Cachulac comunmente [hablan] otra lengua tosca llamada popolucan ecto que toda la gente noble hablan poco o mucho la mexicana; asi mysmo ay ynterpolados algunos naturales que hablan otra lengua que llaman otomí, que esta, fuera de la mexicana, es la mas natural en este reyno por haber muchos pueblos della."

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Tepeacac and her subject towns paid the following tribute to the Empire:

OTHER GOODS

4,000 loads of lime

4,000 loads of thick canes

8,000 loads of canes for arrow shafts

800 deerskins

8,000 loads of acayet "perfumes que usan para la boca"

200 *cacaxiles*¹¹

Tribute of the component towns.—Ahuatlán (a) paid a tribute of cane.¹²

Coatzinco supplied cane, shields made of the same material, spearheads, bows and arrows, and white lime.¹³

Texalucan (b) claimed to have given military service only—the enemies including the distant Coixca.¹⁴

32. YOALTEPEC

The province of Yoaltepec occupies the right-hand third of page 18 of the Matricula, and the lower third of folio 40^r of the Codex Mendocino. In the original codex only the cabecera is identified by an annotation in the roman alphabet—as is often done—though in the Mendocino all the towns are thus identified.

This province, which contained six principal towns, lay on the northwestern border of modern Oaxaca State, and perhaps extended into Guerrero. On the basis of the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "Ciudad de México," and a considerable number of documentary references, five of these six important towns, as well as a few others, have been located. The following table shows the correspondences between old and modern names:

Ehuacalco, 4	Calihuáá
Patlanalá (?), 5	[See Remarks on Towns]
Tzilacaapan, 6	Silacayoápam
Yoaltepec (? 3)	[See Remarks on Towns]
Yxicayá (?), 10	[See Remarks on Towns]

One town remains quite elusive: Ychcaatoyac.

We may add to the list given above the following towns, which were minor subjects of the province: Acatlan (2), Ayoxochiquilazala (9), Piaxtla (1), Tecomaixtlahuacan (8), and Ycpatepec (?) (7).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Acatlan recognized Moctezuma and his forebears as overlords and claimed to be linked with the Mexican blood royal.¹⁶ It has been placed in Yoaltepec Province because it formerly had wars with Ytzucan and Tepexic,¹⁷ which were within Tepeacac Province, as we see in the Matricula. In the mid-sixteenth century it was bordered by Izucar, Tepexic, Petlalzinco, and Chila, and this also tends to place it in the Yoaltepec sphere.¹⁸

¹⁷ PNE, 5. 60

¹⁸ PNE, 1: No 6

Ayoxochiquilazala seems to have been the anchor of the Empire in this region. A local Mexican garrison consumed all the tribute, which never reached Mexico.¹⁹

Ehuacalco, suggests Troncoso,²⁰ may be the Calihualá [Cal-eual-lan] of today. The proposed identification seems reasonable.

Patlanalan is a name which apparently survives only in documents. The town was subject to Tonalá (a) and was half a league from "Çila- cajoapa."²¹

Piaxtla was probably "Old Piaxtlan" (Huehuepiaxtlan), which lay to the west of the site of the modern town. Among the towns subject to Piaxtla in 1581—and probably also linked with it in 1519—were Tuzantlan (c) and Ilamatzinco (b). These appear on the Puebla map of the Comisión Geográfico-Exploradora, 1908.

Xicayan became "Xicayan de Tovar" in colonial days.²² It confined with Puctla and Tlacomayztlauaca,²³ which are the Putla Santa María and Tecomaxtlahuacan of today. Xicayan de Tovar was nine leagues southwest of "Instlauaca" (Juxtluahuaca)²⁴ and four leagues in the same direction from Ayoxochiquilazala.²⁵ Northeast of the ancient Acuitlapan, Guerrero, are a C. Jicayan and a R. Jicayan which indicate the site. It should be pointed out that the Jicayán of today (near Tlaca- mama), also existing in the sixteenth century,²⁶ is a quite different pueblo.

Ycpatepec, which enjoyed a certain pre-Hispanic fame, may be located by piecing together a variety of references. Though it is described in the relación of Cuauhuitlan along with towns of the modern district of Jamiltepec on the Oaxaca coast, it is stated to be no less than thirty-five leagues to the northeast of those towns,²⁷ beyond a sierra, in the Mixteca Baja.²⁸ Elsewhere it is given as ten leagues from Mixtepec

(subject to Tlaxiaco)²⁹ and three leagues from "Cilacayoapan."³⁰ With all this information, the town may be placed fairly well. In the present map it is identified tentatively with Montañas, a town on the Oaxaca map of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento.³¹ This lies south of Silacayoapam and may have fallen under the jurisdiction of south-lying Cuauhuitlan.³²

Ychcaatoyac, which has not been found, is also called "Atojocinapa" in a list which names its encomendero as "el hijo de Pierres Gómez."³³

Yoaltepec has been located from references only. When the Mexicans invaded the south, they took, in succession, the towns of Oaxtepec, Izucar, and Yoaltepec.³⁴ "Ygualtepec" (the name suffered the same change as Yoallan-Iguala) was held by the encomendero of Ayoxochiquilazala.³⁵ The clearest reference, however, comes from a document dealing with Piaxtla, which places Yoaltepec ten leagues straight south of that town.³⁶

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—With Yoaltepec we enter the Mixtec provinces. A codex in purely Mixtec style, for example, is preserved from Tecomaixtlahuacan,³⁷ and the relación of that town³⁸ tells us it is of Mixtec speech, as proves to be true of Ycpatepec.³⁹ The northern part of the province, on the other hand, seems to have been mexicano rustico, "because it is the province of Totolan"—a quite mysterious reference.⁴⁰

²⁹ RMEH, T. 2, Appendix, pp. 142-143.

³¹ Ycpatepec was celebratedly mountainous.

³⁹ PNE, 4: 158.

⁴⁰ PNE, 5: 78.

Provincial borders in 1519.—North of Yoaltepec Province lay the Empire province of Tepeacac, and to the east that of Tlaçhquiauco, but to the south were other Mixtec peoples never subjugated by the Triple Alliance: Tototepec of Oaxaca and her allies. Ayoxochiquilazala was an outpost against these. To the west Tlapan and Quiauhteopen were Empire territory again.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute rendered by Yoaltepec was small but choice; it included gold and turquoises. It is listed as follows:

CLOTHING

400 large mantles
1 warrior's costume with shield*

FOOD

40 jars of honey

OTHER TRIBUTE

40 little gold disks, "the size of a Host" and as thick as one's finger*⁴¹
10 middle-sized turquoise masks (mosaic)*⁴²

Tribute of the component towns.—Acatlan gave military supplies and food to the Imperial armies which passed through it and from time to time sent gifts of mantles and rabbitskins to its overlord in Mexico, as well as providing personal services. Certain gifts were received in return.⁴³

Ayoxochiquilazala, though a garrison town giving military service, also paid tribute of gold dust.⁴⁴

Piaztla gave salt and wax annually, and aided the Imperial troops passing through the town by supplying them with war clubs, shields, arrows, and food.⁴⁶

Tecomaixtlahuacan was under the rein lightly. It had its own lord and none other, we are told in the sixteenth-century relación, but it chose none the less to send Moctezuma gifts now and again, and tribute is the criterion of the present map.⁴⁷

Ycpatepec acquired certain articles by trade with peoples thirty leagues away and then delivered them to the Mexican tax collectors in Teutla (or Tentla). These articles were green feathers, gold, and chalchihuites.⁴⁸

Yxicayan gave a combination of dwarf peppers and mantles "and nothing else."⁴⁹

33. TLAPAN

The province of Tlapan contained fourteen towns, according to the glyphs of the Matricula (p. 17) and the Mendocino (fol. 39'). In the Matricula only "Tlauhpā" is identified in a later hand; in the Mendocino, all towns are. Tlapan Province lay in the eastern extreme of modern Guerrero. Of its fourteen towns, seven have been located on the modern map. The following correspondence between ancient and modern place names has been established, the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "Ciudad de México," having served as base.

⁴⁹ RMEH, T. 2, Appendix, p 152: "acudian con el tributo á montecuma al cual acudian con mantas y agu y no con otra cosa."

The remaining seven towns of the Matrícula cannot be located with any certainty, though there are some additional data available regarding them. These towns are:

Acocozpā
Ahuacatla
Amaxac

Fluitzannola
Ocoapan
Xocotla

Yualan

On the other hand, we may confidently add and locate the following subject towns, thanks to another source: Ayutla (8), Cintla (?) (10), Copalitech (11), and Tototepec (9).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Acuitlapā is the Quitlapa of today, located southeast of Metlatonoc in the atlas of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento. It is described in colonial days as "Cuytlapa," twelve leagues from Tlapan.⁴⁰

Ahuacatla, not located, was five leagues from Tlapan, according to a report which gives it as "Ahuacatitlan."⁴¹

Amaxac probably corresponds to "Atlemaxac" or "Atlimaxax," which was a cabecera one league from Tlapan.⁴²

Ayutla was clearly tributary,⁴³ and with it a series of seaboard towns including Cintla and Copalitech.⁴⁴

Cintla seems to have lain close to the modern Juchitán(a).⁴⁵ It was one of the seaboard towns subject to Ayutla (q.v.).

⁴⁴ PNE, 4: 259: "antes que se ganase la tierra, eran todos los pueblos marítimos sujetos al dicho pueblo de Ayutla."

⁴⁵ Identification by the writer, in "A Western Extension of Zapotec Further Remarks," Tlalocan (1944), 1: 361.

Copalitech, called "Copalitas" in the sixteenth century, was considered a seaboard town and thus anciently subject to Ayutla (q.v.).⁵⁵

Huitzannola is called "Huitzaxola" elsewhere and is said to be an estancia of [A]cuatlapan.⁵⁶

Tototepec, one of many towns of this name, is not on available maps, but may be located by references. Xochitonala,⁵⁷ which must be the Tonalá of today, was "de Ayutla tres leguas y otras tres de Tututepeque."⁵⁸ The same source notes: "La estancia de Tututepeque esta tres leguas de la mar." The inhabitants of Tototepec are said to be "mexicanos que quedaron allí por guarnición que solia tener Montecuma." The town must have been the principal anchor of the Empire in this remote coast.

Xocotla, apparently, was a town three leagues from Tlapan⁵⁹ and should not be confused with the distant Yope-speaking town of the same name on the Río Papagayo.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The people of Tlapan Province bore two principal names, though they may have been one group ethnologically and linguistically. Those of the north were called Tlapaneca and those of the south Yope. Sahagún identifies the two, remarking that "these Yopime and Tlapaneca are the people of the region of Yopitzinco; they are called Yope because their district is called Yopitzinco and they are also called Tlapaneca, which means Ochre Men, because they painted themselves red . . ."⁶⁰ It should be pointed out, however, that although the people of Tlapan and Malinaltepec and the northern towns are said to speak Tlapanec, those of Tototepetl and Xochitonala and the south are called Yope-speakers,⁶¹ as if Yope were another tongue. Whether or not the Yope are to be identified with the Tla-panel, a good part of the Yope remained independent of the Mexicans until the arrival of the Spaniards and gave the Spaniards themselves much trouble.

These Tlapanec and/or Yope seem to be linked with distant groups to the south and north. The nearest kin of the Tlapanec language is that found in Nicaragua,⁶³ but certain customs of the Yope are identical with those of the Apache.⁶⁴

The recent discovery by Ortega of several codices from the Tlapanec zone provides us with a potential source of information on this formerly almost unknown region.⁶⁵ Though the codices are still unexploited, they have already shown that the Tlapanec used a pre-Mexican⁶⁶ calendar system. There is less novelty in the observation that the god Xipe Totec came to the highland via the Yope. His temple, which stood where the western towers of the Cathedral of Mexico now stand, was called Yopico.

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the northwest of Tlapan lay the province of Tlalcozauhitlan, to the north that of Quiauhitcopan, and to the northeast Yopaltepēc—the borderlands of the Mixteca. Tlapan Province extended down to the Pacific Coast to the fortress of Tototepēc (not to be confused with the Mixtec kingdom of Tototepēc in adjacent Oaxaca). On both sides of this bastion war was continually being waged. The greater portion of the Yope roamed unconquered in Yopitzinco to the west; and to the east was a doubtful region of independent Mixtec peoples, with the other Tototepēc of Oaxaca looming as a background power.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Ortega's startling discovery of the balance of the "Codex Humboldt I"⁶⁷ and its identification by Toscano ⁶³ On the Tlapanec language, see Radin, "The Tlapanec Language of Guerero," International Journal of American Linguistics (1933), 8, 45-72, and Schulze Jena, Indiana III (1938).

as the "Nómina de Tributos de Tlapa y su señorío al Imperio Mexicano" gives us unparalleled material for a future study in detail of the tribute of this province. We now have the bookkeeping from both sides, that of the conquerors and that of the conquered. Until the codices are fully published, however, we can only remark the abundant tribute of gold, confirmed by the Matricula and reconfirmed by the excavations of Atlitzac, which may have been included in the province.⁶⁷

The Matricula and Mendocino specify:

CLOTHING

400 bundles of mantles and women's blouses
 402 bundles⁶⁸ of little red-striped mantles
 800 bundles of large mantles
 2 warriors' costumes with shields*

OTHER TRIBUTE

10 strips of gold "de quatro de dos en ancho y de largo tres quartos de vara," and the thickness of parchment
 20 bowls of gold dust, each bowl of 2 almocadas capacity
 800 bowls called tecomates, "the good kind they drink cocoa from"

Tribute of the component towns.—We have testimony regarding the tribute of one town, Ayutla, in both the pre-Hispanic and the early colonial periods. On certain other towns, only information about the latter period is available.

Ayutla and near-by towns joined in giving Moctezuma the following every six moons: a bar of heavy gold, three fingers thick; gourds; deer and tiger skins; fish and cotton.⁶⁹ In the mid-sixteenth century it gave 40 measures of gold dust and various items of clothing quarterly, as well as a turkey daily and the services of three Indians in a cacao grove.⁷⁰

Tlapan in the mid-sixteenth century gave 62 pesos, 3 tomines of gold quarterly, 3 loads of honey, 5 pots, and 3 loads of wax in pellets.⁷¹

Tototepec, likewise about a generation after the Conquest, gave 50 measures of gold dust and certain articles of clothing quarterly, and daily gave the services of seven Indians, and a chicken to the Calpix-que.⁷²

34. TLACHQUIAUCO

The province of Tlachquiauco was not large. It contained three principal towns, according to folio 45^r of the Mendocino Codex, the folio copied from the recto side of a lost leaf (page "22A") which followed Coyolapan and preceded Xoconochco in the original manuscript. Of the three towns of Tlachquiauco Province, one has not been located, but the other two (lying in northwestern Oaxaca) have been identified as follows on the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "Ciudad de México":

The town which has eluded identification is Capotlan.

Mixtepec (2) and Tlacotepec (1) are added from other sources.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Mixtepec was subject to Tlachquiauco in the days when the latter still held out against the Mexica, and presumably fell with it.⁷³

Tlacotepec appears in some of the younger Moctezuma's conquests jointly with Ycpatepec (in the province of Yoaltepec).

Tlachquiauco is a name which has suffered considerable corruption, but there is no novelty in the identification of the town.

Capotlan appears vaguely linked with Etla and Macuilxochic in one source.⁷⁴

⁷¹ PNE, 1: No 725. "dan cada ochenta dias sesenta y dos pesos y tres tomines de oro en poluo y tres cargas de miel y cinco xarros y tres cargas de cera en pelotas" The statement also includes similar data from near-by towns.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—This province seems to have been formed out of a vanquished Mixtec city-state, at a very late period indeed in the Empire's history. It is listed as one of three principal pre-Hispanic powers of the region in the "Relación de Teoçapotlan,"⁷⁵ though we know that it lost its independence in 1511 or 1512.⁷⁶

Provincial borders in 1519.—To the south lay sister Mixtec states such as Puctla and Zacatepec, which defied the Mexicans successfully, to the east and north the Empire province of Coayxtlahuacan, and to the west that of Yaltepec.

Regional names.—Tlachquiauco lay in what is commonly called the Mistecapan.

TRIBUTE

The only data available on the tribute of Tlachquiauco Province comes from the Codex Mendocino:

CLOTHING

400 large mantles
1 warrior's costume and shield*

OTHER GOODS*

20 vessels of gold dust
5 sacks of cochineal
400 bunches of quetzal feathers

35. COAYXTLAHUACAN

The province of Coayxtlahuacan appears on page 21 of the Matricula and is copied on folio 43^r of the Codex Mendocino. It contained eleven principal towns,⁷⁷ all of which have been found. They lay in northern Oaxaca. In the Matricula the towns of "Cohuaxtlauacā," "Tamaçolapan," and "Tepozcololan" are identified in the roman alphabet; and in the same codex the right-hand margin is so badly worn that the glyphs of Tamaçolan and Mitla are no longer visible. These are preserved in the Mendocino copy, however. The present map is based chiefly upon the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "Ciudad de México." Correspondences between former and modern names are given below:

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Atlatlaucca was visited by tax collectors from Coayxtlahuacan.⁷⁸ It may be found in the Oaxaca map of the atlas of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento.

Coayxtlahuacan was a celebrated Mixtec stronghold, the downfall of which was one of the great events of the fifteenth century. The Mexicans made it a garrison and center for tribute collection.⁷⁹

Chila (2) admitted being subject to the Empire; the town denied

"estos dos pueblos de Atlatlaucca y Malinaltepeque reconocían por Rey a Munteçuma ... dos yndios ... que se llamanauan 'calpisques' ... hacian rrecoixer [el tributo] y lo llevauan a la prouincia de Cuestlauaca, donde el dicho Munteçuma tenia puesta su frontera de gente de guerra."

⁷⁹ PNE, 4' 165, for example, speaks of "Cuestlauaca, donde el dicho Munteçuma tenia puesto su frontera de gente de guerra." See also Papalotlcpac, below. When the invading army of Cortés reached Lzucar de Matamoros, Coayxtlahuacan threw off the Mexican yoke and surrendered to the Spaniards. (Cortés, Cartas y relaciones [1866], pp. 152-153).

paying tribute, but "the lords of Chila, when it pleased them to," exchanged presents with Moctezuma.⁸⁰

Ixitlan was a subject town which gave no tribute beyond feeding the highland troops that passed through it.⁸¹

Malinaltepec (10) sent its tribute to Coayxtlahuacan.⁸² This Malinaltepec, which is stated to lie eight leagues northeast of Atlatlaucca and five leagues west of "los Yolos" [Yoloxonecuilan], appears on Bevan's map.⁸³ It should not be confused with the nearest of several homonyms, that is, with the Malinaltepec southwest of Atlatlaucca.

Mictlan, as Jiménez Moreno has pointed out,⁸⁴ must be the present Mitlatongo.

Papalotipac paid tribute to its cacique, and he to Moctezuma;⁸⁵ probably the Papalotiquipaque of the sixteenth century⁸⁶ is one of two towns called Papalo today, southeast of Quiotepec.

Petlalitzinco, like Ixitlan, paid its tribute by supplying the armies of the Empire with food and men.⁸⁷

Tepeucila had been subjected by Moctezuma shortly before the Spaniards arrived.⁸⁸

Xaltepec appears on the Oaxaca map of the atlas of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento.

Yancuitlan may be found on the 1912 map of the Comisión Geográfico-Exploradora.

Coctulan was conquered by the younger Moctezuma, as will be detailed in the second part of this work. It is mentioned as a garrison town on folio 17^r of the Mendocino, with two governors—a "tlacatectli" and a "tlacochtectli" (cf. chap. viii, no. 37).

⁸⁶ PNE, 4: 88.

⁸⁸ PNE, 4: 95. "Al tiempo que vinieron los españoles era Señor natural de este pueblo un cacique que se dezía canchuchu camíñaa, y en tiempo de este los sujeto Montecçuma."

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The province of Coayxtlahuacan was Mixtec in speech, except for Cuicatec (extending eastward from Cuicatlán), Chinantec (north and east of Atlatlaucca), and, curiously enough, Chocho-Popoloca in the very heart of the province (Tamaçulapan to Coayxtlahuacan).

In Coayxtlahuacan Province centered the rich and complicated Mixtec culture, concerning which some detailed information has been preserved for us in such codices as the Nuttall and the Vindobonensis. Most extensive data on the pre-Hispanic history and ethnography of this region can be recovered from these manuscripts when they are fully studied. Many of the towns of this province were originally important city-states, with their own dynastic histories.

Among the notable cultural differences separating the peoples of this province from the Náhuatl, are such variant calendar systems as the Mixtec, studied by Jiménez Moreno,⁸⁹ and the Cuicatec, in the still inadequately investigated "Codex Fernández Leal."

Provincial borders in 1519.—At the height of the Empire of Moctezuma, Coayxtlahuacan had certain half-intimidated (though not actually subjected) zones to the north, the sprawling Empire province with its Oaxaca garrison to the east, the still resisting Mixtec city-states⁹⁰ to the south, and Tlaxiaco and other Mixtec towns, recently overrun, to the west.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The province of Coayxtlahuacan was exploited for the following items:

CLOTHING

- 400 bundles of quilted mantles, richly decorated
- 400 bundles of mantles, striped red and white
- 400 bundles of black-and-white mantles
- 400 bundles of loincloths
- 400 bundles of women's blouses and skirts
- 2 warriors' costumes together with shields*

⁸⁹ Códice de Yanhuelán.

⁹⁰ Such as Puctla, Zácatepec, and others the relaciones of which appear in RMEH, T. 2, Appendix.

OTHER GOODS*

- 2 strings of chalchiuites
- 800 bunches of quetzal feathers
- 1 royal emblem called tlalpiloni
- 40 sacks of cochinal
- 20 bowls of gold dust

Tribute of the component towns.—A few details exist concerning the way in which the payment of this rich tribute was apportioned.

Atlatlaucca and a fellow town paid cochineal, cotton mantles, green and varicolored feathers, and chalchiuites, all of which they purchased from other towns by means of little cotton mantles which served as money. They also gave military aid.¹²

Cuicatlan gave feathers, gold, and "piedras" to the tribute collectors, who relayed these items to higher officials. The collectors themselves were given (mojida?) mantles and food, and sometimes fruit was sent to the Mexican garrisons in the Mixteca.¹³

Chila's presents of gold jewels and mantles have been mentioned.¹⁴

Ixxitlan claimed to have given no tribute other than gifts presented on visits to the capital. These presents were rich feathers and precious stones and live snakes to feed the birds of the Royal Aviary.¹⁵

Malinaltepec shared in giving the items listed under Atlatlaucca, above.

¹⁶ "En tiempo de su ynfidelidad y antes que los españoles los sujetasen obedecian a Montecuma ... Lo que tributaban los naturales a su Señor natural y este a Montecuma era oro en polvo, bastimentos que llevaban a las guardnaciones donde Montecuma tenia gente de guerra" (PNE, 4: 90).

Petlalzinco was obliged to feed Empire troops when they passed through the town.⁸⁶

Tepecula contributed mantles and tiger skins bought from their neighbors, and a few feathers.⁸⁷

Texopan gathered these items for the tribute: parrot feathers, slaves, and small amounts of cochineal.⁸⁸

Çoçolan was a gold-producing region which caught the eye of Cortés very quickly—doubtless because of the display of tributes in the capital.⁸⁹

36. COYOLAPAN

SOURCES OF THE MAP

Coyolapan was a huge province, the heart of the State of Oaxaca. The principal native towns numbered eleven, nine of which have been located. They are depicted on page 22 of the Matricula and in the Mendocino copy on folio 44¹. The cabecera and one other town are identified in roman letters in the Matricula. The modern map which has served to reconstruct the province is the American Geographical Society's "Millionth Map," sheet "Ciudad de México." Correspondences between former and modern names follow:

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Camotlan, 3	Camotlán
Coyolapan, 21	Cuilapam

Two towns represented on the Matricula page remain to be located: Quatzontepetl and Teocuitlatlan.

Besides the towns identified, many lesser subject towns, discovered through sources other than the Matricula and the Mendocino copy, should also be listed:

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Atepec and three neighbors "recognized Moctezuma as lord."¹⁰⁰

Coatlan, in some unspecified period, rebelled against its chief and sent ambassadors to Mexico to arrange its incorporation into the Empire.¹⁰¹ Today the town seems to have broken up into a cluster of satellites, of which a rough center has been taken for the map.

Coyolapan, now Cuilapa, ought really to be called "Quacuyolapan"—if we are to trust the relación of that town.¹⁰²

Chichicapan first belonged to Teozapotlan, but was fighting off attacks from Mixtec neighbors at the moment of the Spanish Conquest, at which time its inhabitants settled matters by allying themselves with Moctezuma.¹⁰³

Cuixtlan (32) warred with Tetiquipa to the south, and this may possibly indicate the limits between the province of Coyolapan and the free Mixtec state of Tototepec.¹⁰⁴

¹⁰⁰ RMEH, T. 2, Appendix, p. 123. Tecuiculco, Atepec, Coquiapa, Xaltiango. "Todos estos cuatro Pueblos Reconocian por Rey a muntecumha el qual los Abia conquistado Por fuerças de armas."

¹⁰³ PNE, 4: 115.

¹⁰⁴ RMEH, T. 2, Appendix, p. 115.

Exetlan was near the modern Tepantepec.¹⁰⁵

Guaxacac (as Huaxac[ac]) is one of the garrison towns mentioned on folio 17^o of the Mendocino (cf. chap. viii, no. 37) as being governed by a "tlacateclí" and a "tlacochteclí." The fortress was actually located on the Cerro del Fortin (Acatepec or Ecatepec), according to the "Relación de Cuilapa" (Tlalocan [1945], 2:20).

Huiztepec and certain neighboring towns together paid tribute to Moctezuma.

Itzquintepec was a town the identification of which involves the whole question of the "pueblos peñoles." Probably we may identify it with the modern town of Peñoles.

Iztepexi recalled in the 1580's that "certain Mexica" had overcome them, whereupon they paid double tribute, as the Mixtec also exploited them.¹⁰⁶

Macuilxochic remembered only being subject to Teozapotlan,¹⁰⁷ but figures along with the rest of the Empire in the Matricula.

Mictlan (28), since it was subject to Teozapotlan, was subject to the Mexica.¹⁰⁸

Ocelotepec was a town the inhabitants of which "anciently had Moctezuma, lord of Mexico, as their lord."^{109,110}

Quauxilotcpac, now Huajolotcpac, is derived from "quauxilotl"

¹⁰⁵ A collective relación which includes this and the two following pueblos exists (RMEH, T. 2, Appendix, pp. 185-191). Six pueblos in all are listed, in this order: Itzquintepec, Eztetla, Quauxilotcpac [sic!], Huiztepec [sic!], Totomachapa, and Jilotepec, "los cuales estan como aqui van puestos uno en pos de otro y corren norte sur." Now three of these appear on any map: No. 3, Quaxolotcpac (11 leagues from Antequera or Oaxaca City), is Huajolotcpac, No. 4, Huiztepec (12 leagues from Antequera), is Huitepec; and No. 6, Jilotepec (17 leagues from Antequera and defined as "cerro al modo de una mazorca de maiz"), is Elotepec. In view of these three fixed points, Itzquintepec (6 leagues from Antequera and 9 leagues from Teotzacularco) is most likely the modern Peñoles, Eztetla (lying between Itzquintepec and Quauxilotcpac and 7 leagues from Teotzacularco) should fall somewhere near modern Tepantepec. And, finally, Totomachapa (like Jilotepec, 10 leagues from Zola) is perhaps the modern Yucucando. (Totomachapa was 8 leagues from Teotzacularco, and Jilotepec only 6.) All these six pueblos peñoles "Jueron . . . en tiempo de su jentilidad de montezuma señor de mexico al qual tributaban oro y mantas de algodon."

¹⁰⁷ PNE, 4: 102: "El gobierno que tenian hera lo que les mandava el señor del pueblo de Teozapotlan . . ." See Teozapotlan, below.

¹⁰⁸ PNE, 4: 111. See Teozapotlan, below.

¹⁰⁹ PNE, 4: 138 "en su antiguedad tenyan por señor a Montezuma, señor de Mexico . . ."

in the relación of the "pueblos peñoles," hence we have restored the proper spelling.

Quauxilotitlan appears in the sixteenth-century sources as "Guaxilotitlan," two leagues from Etlan, the name being derived from "quauxilotl." It should not be confused with Quauxilotlcpac, mentioned above. The inhabitants of Quauxilotitlan "were subject to Moctezuma for many years before the Spaniards came."¹¹⁰

Teotitlan del Valle was subject first to the Zapotec lords (at Teozapotlan, and then to the government in exile at Tehuantepec) and afterwards to the imperialistic Mixtec of Coyolapan.¹¹¹ And Coyolapan appears in the Matricula.

Teotzacularco was a Mixtec city-state which had made an "arrangement" with Moctezuma a few years before the Spanish invasion.¹¹²

Teozapotlan, or "Zaachila," as it is better known, was the traditional seat of Zapotec power. Since various pueblos of the Valley of Oaxaca, in their sixteenth-century relaciones, are said to be subject to Teozapotlan, no mention being made of Moctezuma, it is important to point out that Teozapotlan fell before the Mixtec of Coyolapan late in aboriginal history (the Zapotec caciques then retiring to Tehuantepec). Coyolapan in turn was subjugated by the Triple Alliance.¹¹³ Consequently, any town said to be subject to Teozapotlan may be considered to be subject to the Mexica.¹¹⁴ The relación of Teozapotlan speaks only of a near-by Mexican garrison close to Oaxaca City which had been put there "by means of good friendship and without war." Teozapotlan is stated to have been quite independent (a reminiscence of earlier and better times?) and to have paid tribute to this Mexican garrison "only in order to be friendly."¹¹⁵ Tribute is tribute.

¹¹¹ PNE, 4, 105.

¹¹³ "Relación de Cuilapa," Tlalocan (1945), 2: 19-20.

¹¹⁵ PNE, 4, 193. "dizien los yndios que poco antes que los españoles viniesen solo auian los de Tututepec que estos eran guerreros por si, y los de Tlachiacos que tambien eran

Tecuicuilco owned Moctezuma as lord after being conquered by force of arms.¹¹⁶

Tetepac was subject to Teozapotlan, and later to Moctezuma.¹¹⁷

Tlalcuechahuayan may be found on the Oaxaca map of the atlas of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento.

Tlacolula, by virtue of having been subject to Teozapotlan, was subject to Moctezuma.¹¹⁸

Tlaliztacan is another subject of Teozapotlan, and therefore, it is to be inferred, of the Mexicans also.¹¹⁹

Totomachapa may be found on the 1912 map of Oaxaca made by the Comisión Geográfico-Exploradora.

Xaltianguis, the Jaltianguis Santa María of today, is cited under its old name in a document of Ixtepexi,¹²⁰ as well as in several other places.

Xilotepec was one of the "pueblos peñoles," all of which were subject to the Empire.¹²¹

Yoloxonecuilan was a town the name of which has atrophied to "los Yolos." In its earlier form the name of this place appears in the conquest lists of the Empire, jointly with the names of such towns as Xaltianguis and Itztitlan (6) (Ixtlán de Juárez?). Yoloxonecuilan had, moreover, the same cura as Atepec.¹²²

Zenzontepec appears late in the conquest lists of the Empire.

Coquiapan and certain neighboring towns are said to have "recognized Moctezuma as lord."¹²³

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—At the time of the Spanish Conquest the predominant language of the province of Coyolapan was Zapotec, though the Zapoteca had lost their political power. Two other groups also inhabited the province.¹²¹ If we draw a line from north to south through Malinaltepec, Etla, Huaxolotitlan, Oaxaca, and Teozapotlan, then west to Totomachapa and Xilotepec, we delineate the western limits of Zapotec. The region beyond this line is Mixtec. In the northern panhandle, the fringe of the area in which Chinantec was spoken was a little south of Coaxomulco (1).¹²²

The advanced and dissimilar cultures of the Zapotec and Mixtec, especially in the frontier zone of Oaxaca City, have become known in recent years through the investigations of Dr. Alfonso Caso.¹²³

Provincial borders in 1519.—The province of Coyolapan was one of the far corners of the Empire. To the west and south it faced unfriendly Mixtec city-states, chiefly the huge realm dominated by Toto-tepec de Oaxaca. Eastward lay the Mixe and the "unprotected" Zapoteca. Both of these were uneasy frontiers. In the west and north, however, lay the strong Empire garrison of Coayxtlahuacan, in the province of the same name.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Coyolapan and its subject towns paid the following tribute to the Triple Alliance:

CLOTHING

400 bundles of richly worked mantles
800 bundles of large mantles

FOOD*

4 wooden cribs (2 of maize, 1 of beans, and 1 of chian)

OTHER GOODS*

20 gold disks, the size of an average plate and as thick as one's forefinger
20 bags of cochineal

¹²² García Granados, "Contribución para la geografía etnográfica y lingüística de Oaxaca," Boletín de la Sociedad Mexicana de Geografía y Estadística (1934).

¹²³ In addition to various monographs, Dr Caso has also written a good summary in his Las culturas mixteca y zapoteca (1939).

Tribute of the component towns.—Certain elements of the foregoing tribute may be traced.

Atepec, Coquapan, Tecuicuilco, and Xaltianguisco acquired the tribute items exacted from them—green (quetzal?) feathers and chalchiuites—by barter with other regions.¹²⁷

Coatlan gave gold and mantles, receiving military protection in return. (The gold tribute was three marks of gold dust quarterly in early colonial days.¹²⁸)

Eztetlan and five other towns jointly paid a tribute of gold and cotton mantles.¹²⁹

Huiztepec, as one of the “pueblos peñoles,” gave gold and cotton mantles.

Itzquintepec gave part of a joint tribute of gold and cotton mantles.

Itzepexi, which had two masters, Mixtec and Mexican,¹³⁰ paid them tribute in base gold, green feathers, deer, maize, and turkeys; also, its inhabitants rendered personal services to the Mexican garrison near Oaxaca. The gold and feathers were acquired in a unique fashion, being earned by going to the Isthmus and working six months or a year there cultivating lands.¹³¹

Ocelotepec gave gold dust and mantles and cochineal, “all in small quantities and once a year,” and received in return mantles, sandals, and feathers of many colors.¹³² This exceptional treatment was doubt-

less due to the strategic position of Ocelotepec on the Tototepec frontier.

Quauxilotepac and five other towns gave a tribute of gold and cotton mantles.¹³³

Quauxilotlitan paid white cotton mantles and women's blouses, loincloths, little copper hoops, green birds called "xiuhtotol," and maize.¹³⁴

Teotitlan del Valle rendered tribute of gold dust, cotton mantles, fowl, bundles of aji, and slaves.¹³⁵

Teotzacularco paid chalchiuites and feathers and mantles of cotton and henequen, and also made special milpas of maize, beans, chia, and cotton—all of which went to the local Mexican garrison.¹³⁶

Teticpac gave fowl, hares, rabbits, deer, and honey.¹³⁷

Tlacolula gave military service only.¹³⁸

Tlaliztacan paid in feathers, mantles, and military service.¹³⁹

Totomachapa joined the other "pueblos peñoles" in a tribute of gold and cotton mantles.¹⁴⁰

Xilotepec, like the other "pueblos peñoles," gave gold and cotton mantles.¹¹

¹³³ See Itzquintepcc, above.

¹³⁷ PNE, 4: 111: "el tributo que les davan heran gallinas, liebres, conejos, venados, miel."

¹³⁹ PNE, 4: 179. "tributauan plumas, mantas, e le servian en yr a la guerra."

VIII. THE HEART OF THE EMPIRE

37. CITLALTEPEC AND TLATELOLCO SOURCES OF THE MAP

ON PAGES 1 and 2 of the Matricula and on folios 17^v and 18^r of the Codex Mendocino appear the glyphs of the towns of a tributary province, together with a group of glyphs of a different nature. To segregate the information useful for this study, a minute examination of these pages is unavoidable.

The body of the Matricula follows a certain scheme: around the outer edges of the page a band of place glyphs ordinarily appears and, within this three-sided frame, figure paintings of the objects paid as tribute by the towns listed. The first leaf, however, departs from this scheme on both its recto and verso sides, and forms the object of the present remarks.

These pages of towns and tributes (pp. 3-28 of the Matricula as it exists today), together with two leaves which were separated from the manuscript more than a century ago (the oft-mentioned American Philosophical Society leaves) are copied, more or less faithfully, as "la segunda parte de esta ystoria" in that tripartite compilation, the Codex Mendocino, which is divided into: (1) "History of Conquests," (2) "Tribute," and (3) "Ethnography."

In the body of the Matricula and its copy ("la segunda parte de esta ystoria") the tributary condition of a wide area is told in detail, but no mention is made of the very environs of the capital, Tenochtitlan.

Preceding the beginning of section 2 ("Tribute") of the Codex Mendocino there appears a double page (fol. 17^v and 18^r) which is partly equivalent to the first leaf of the battered Matricula. The copy is infinitely more legible than the original, and must be drawn on to understand the latter. Rather exceptionally, in this copy (Mendocino, fol. 17^v-18^r) the materials of the original (Matricula, pp. 1-2) are rearranged, and, since it is the more complete, we cannot be entirely sure of the order of the original glyphs, though we may be certain that their content was copied faithfully.

The content of these pages (which indicates that the first part of the Mendocino is a copy of a lost group of pages of the Matricula) is twofold: we have a list of certain garrison towns with their governors—the framework of the Empire—and we have a list of those towns near Tenochtitlan of which no mention is made in the long series of tribute pages. (Even here, however, only the towns are listed, and not their tribute.)

Frontier garrison towns mentioned with Çitlaltepec.—Page 2 of the Matricula is divided in two by a horizontal line, and the upper half is subdivided by a vertical line, three divisions resulting. In the upper left appears a glyph of a box filled with water. The Mendocino identifies it as Atzacan (unlocated). Beside it is a nopal, which is identified in both manuscripts as Xoconochco (Soconusco). Below are two towns which lay close together in the northern extreme of Puebla (see chap. iv, pp. 61-62): Atlan and Teçapotitlan (also identified in both manuscripts).

Glyphs representing the four garrison towns appear on folio 18¹ of the Mendocino, accompanied by the comment that these towns and certain others had special governors “porque no se rebelasen.” To this group the Mendocino adds a town glyph from the preceding page of the Matricula: Oztoma, the great Guerézo fortress on the Tarascan frontier.

Page 1 of the Matricula is badly effaced, but we can recognize the remnants of four town glyphs: Oztoma, in the lower left-hand corner (copied out of place in the Mendocino, as noted above); and three others (Mendocino copy, fol. 17¹), Poctepec (lower right, unlocated) and, identifiable with the two remaining tepeit-glyphs of the Mendocino (fol. 17¹), Huaxac[ac] (Guaxacac) and Çoçolan in the upper part of the drawing.

This is all the Matricula tells us. Probably a whole sheaf of pages is lost from the beginning of this remarkable manuscript: a section referring chiefly to the conquests of the Tenochca and their allies, which we know only through the Mendocino (sec. 1). In the present case, however, we need not lament the lack of further information, for we have it—though certainly rearranged—in the copy (e.g., Oztoma).

Three other glyphs of key towns in various parts of the Empire appear in the Codex Mendocino, folio 17¹, in the upper center, upper right corner, and right margin center respectively: Quauhtochco

(Huatusco, Veracruz), Quecholtenanco (south of Chilapa), and Ytzteyocan in the province of Quauhtochco. With these three glyphs, preserved only in the Mendocino and lost from the Matricula, our information about the garrison towns ends.¹

Tributary towns in the Citaltepec zone.—Eleven other town glyphs which must have been included in a section now lost from the Matricula are given in the Mendocino on folio 17⁷, ranging down the edge of the page and across the bottom in approved form. The towns fit neatly into our map, as they lie north and south of Tenochtitlan. We shall have to assume that they are the missing tributaries. They are treated as such in this section, even though we know nothing of their tribute.

Of the eleven towns of the tributary province, nine can be located; and these nine towns, listed below, form a series which is to be seen on the 1:100,000 map, "Valle de México," of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento (1937):

Other towns seem to have vanished: Coatlayauhcan and Huixachtitlan.

Tlatelolco.—A certain gap occurs in the very center of this queerly shaped province, between northerly Xaltocan and southerly Yztacalco, ¹ Bernal Díaz (Historia verdadera de la conquista de la Nueva España [1904], I: 302) speaks of three of the four major garrisons of the Matricula, Xoconochco, Oztoma, and Atlán or Teçapotitlan. "... paresce ser que como el gran montezuma temia muchas garniciones, y capitánias de gente de guerra, En todas las provincias, que siempre estavan junto a la rraya dellos, porque vna tenia En lo de soconusco por guarda de lo de guatimala y chiapa, y otra tenia En lo de guaçualco y otra capitania En lo de mechuanacan, y otra a la rraya de panuco, Entre tuçapan [? Tuchpa], y vn pueblo que le pusimos por nombre almeria [Nautla] ques En la costa del norte ..." He substitutes Coatzquälco (of which he was encomendero) for Atzacan, omitting Huaxacac [Guaxacac] and Çopolan in Oaxaca, and Quecholtenanco in Guerrero—as well as the towns for which no governors are mentioned, Poctepec, Ytzteyocan, and Quauhtochco.

but this space may be filled very precisely with the administratively separate center of Tlatelolco and its dependencies. The position given to Tlatelolco in the Matricula (the American Philosophical Society fragment) and in the Mendocino (fol. 19^r) constitutes a problem with which the writer has dealt elsewhere.²

A glance at the map will explain why the Çitlaltepec group and Tlatelolco have been treated together here, although administratively they formed separate tributary provinces.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

The Lake of Texcoco formed the common geographic denominator of these towns.

Acalhuacan, with its minuscule population of forty houses, was the subject of a dispute between the encomendero of Quauhtitlan (BX, 2) and the natives of Tlatelolco in the year 1537,³ and the record of this dispute is sufficiently enlightening to enable one to find the approximate location of Acalhuacan. Since it was disputed along with Atzompan, it has been placed, like that town, to the north of the Sierra de Guadalupe, but on the western (Quauhtitlan) side of the lake—all quite provisionally. The name, "Place of Canoe-Owners," indicates the lacustrine site.

Acolnahuac (located after the printing of the map) was a point on the Azteca-Mexica migration route—now San Bernabé, on the Calzada de Camarones, between Azcapotzalco and the Nonoalco highway.⁴

Coatlayauhcan is mentioned by at least one source, "Anales de Cuauhtitlan," as one of the stopping places of the migrating Azteca-Mexica.

Huixachtitlan probably lay a little south of Xaloztoc. Studies made after the printing of the map indicate that it lay on the migration route of the Códice Huitzilopochtli, between Tequepayuca (now Cerro de Santa Isabel, west of the Villa de Guadalupe) and "Coatepetl" [? Santa Clara Coatitlan]. Tezozomoc (Crónica mexicana [1878], p. 283) places it between Chiquiuhtepetl (Cerro del Chiquihuite) and Coatitlan. Huixachtitlan should not be confused with Huixachtepeltl, now Cerro de la Estrella, in the south of the Valley.

Pupulan was an insular settlement situated on the highway which ran from Tenochtitlan to Tlacopan. It still exists, though not as a separate town; it has now been incorporated into the City of Mexico. Popotlan is noted chiefly for the ancient ahuehuete called "El árbol de la Noche Triste."

Xaltocan, curiously omitted from the 1937 "Valle de México" map, may be found on the map of the State of Mexico, in the 1941 Libros y revistas atlas.

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—In the days of the Empire, Xaltocan was an Otomí center,⁶ whereas Tlatelolco was Náhuatl-speaking. The southern tip of the province (Chalco-Atenco) extended into another Náhuatl-speaking zone—that of the Chalca tribe.

Provincial borders in 1519.—This northern lake region faced the remnants of the Chichimec Empire on the east (the province of Acolhuacan). To the north and west lay those of the later Tepanec Empire, centering in the provinces of Quauhtitlan and Quahuacan. Southwest lay the mainland province of Petlacalco, between the mountains and the lakes, down to the pass which leads into Morelos State today, around Amecameca.

TRIBUTE OF TLATELOLCO

Owing to the fragmentary condition of our evidence (a group of disordered glyphs in the Mendocino copy without a Matricula original by which to check), it is not possible to say anything regarding the tribute of the Cíatlaltepec zone—unless, by chance, it may have been included in the reckoning for Tlatelolco, given below.

For Tlatelolco the evidence is confusing; nevertheless, the writer ventures to present an outline of Tlatelolco's tribute, defended elsewhere.⁷

SOURCES OF THE MAP

On the verso side of the American Philosophical Society leaf (2A) of the Matricula and on folio 20^r and 20^v of the Codex Mendocino the tributary province of Petlacalco is represented. Just as Qitaltepec and Tlatelolco included the northern lakes, so this province included the Lake of Chalco and its southern shore—the Pedregal. The tribute-gathering center lay in the zone of once powerful Azcapotzalco. On the 1:100,000 map “Valle de México” of the Secretaría de Agricultura y Fomento (1937) we find a number of the towns of this province:

REMARKS ON TOWNS

An extensive zone to the south of Lake Chalco is rendered uninhabitable by the lava flow, or "Pedregal," emitted by the Ajusco Mountains, which form the valley rim. If any small settlements existed in this area, their tribute was probably reckoned as a part of that collected from some major town in the region of Xochimilco or Tepoztlán.

Auchpanco is identified by Acosta with Ayapango.

Colhuacacínco,⁸ later San Cristóbal, lay on the shore of Lake Xaltocan, east of Tzompánco (2).

Olac is a barrio of Xochimilco.⁹

Petlacalcatl is the inscription under the glyph of a house made of grass mats, in the Mendocino. It occupies the usual place of the cabecera in the manuscript, and like all the other towns was originally followed by the word "pu[ebl]o." A later hand has struck this out and has replaced it with the word "gobernador," perhaps under the influence of the double (and doubtful) annotation about "Acolhuacá" and "Acolmecatl calpixqui" (tribute collector) which heads Acolhuacan Province.

That something is wrong is evident from the form of the original annotation. It is probably a place glyph, but the annotation takes the form of a personal glyph, I have chosen to read it as Petlacalco. The result is the same, for the Petlacalcatl, on the facing Mendocino page, was a head tribute collector, and the Petlacalco¹⁰ was the "audiencia" building in the Tenochtitlan palace, which also housed a majordomo in charge of the granaries.¹¹

*Texcacoac*¹² is a barrio of Tepotzotlán, and consequently we should judge that it lay north of Tecoloapan (7).

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The northern part of this province was the heart of the Tepanec zone. The Tepanec tribe is assumed—with little proof—to have been Náhuatl-speaking. To the south were two other conquered tribes of better-known affiliation, the Chalca and Xochimilca, mutually related.

Provincial borders in 1519.—South of Petlacalco lay the sterile lava flows which separated it from the province of Chalco (Chalco-Tlalmanalco, not Chalco-Atenco), a province curving down through the mountain passes to Tepoztlán. To the west was the province of Quahuacan, and to the north Quauhtitlan, both at one time Tepanec strongholds. Eastward lay the lake provinces of Cíatlaltepēc and Tlalco-lōlco.

Regional names.—At least the zone around Petlacalco itself belonged to the former Tepanecapan—the Tepanec area subject (until 1428) to Azcapotzalco.

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—The following materials were collected by the tribute gatherers to Petlacalco:

CLOTHING*

- 65 warriors' costumes with shields
- 2,400 loads of mantles of "twisted" cloth
- 800 loads of colored mantles
- 400 loads of loincloths
- 400 loads of women's clothing

FOOD*

- 1 bin of beans
- 1 bin of chian
- 2 bins of huauhtli
